A recent announcement by former Golf King Bobby Jones that he plans to vote for Wendell Willkie in the forthcoming Presidential election yesterday brought from Attorney General Ellis Arnall an opinion that if Jones votes in the Democratic primary he will not be allowed to cast his ballot for Willkie in the general election.

Questioned about this phase of the election, Arnall said he interpreted the rules of the Democratic Party of Georgia as meaning that Republicans could not vote in the Democratic primary.

He contends that any voter who casts a ballot in the primary thereby pledges himself to vote for the Democratic candidates in the general election.

Arnall made the following citation from the rules of the Georgia Democratic Party:

Germans Claim Battles Over London's Heart

Both Sides of Thames Afire, Destruction Enormous, Enemy Declares

By The Associated Press.
BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Authorized German sources proclaimed tonight that wave after wave of bombers had hurled lavish destruction on the London environs late today, lining both banks of the Thames with fires, bomb craters and the wreckage of industrial plants.

The British fought back with 3,000 or more planes and with every weapon at their command. Their fury was that of men who know their very existence is in the balance.

But the mass scale German attack, unprecedented in all history, is designed to prove that "no power on earth can stop the Nazi air force," declared German sources.

Battles Over London.
Violent air battles raged over the heart of London, while the thunder of cannon reverberated in the mighty city that re-echoed with the incessant, eerie shrill of air raid sirens.

DNB, official German news agency, called the titanic struggle a battle "of the greatest dimension" with the British numerically outnumbering the Nazis and "employing everything at their disposal" to ward off the German raiders.

"Like gnats over a swamp, so the fighters danced over grey London," the news agency said. Nazi squadrons broke through the British defense zone to the south, the Germans said, and burst into the iron ring of London with great blows at airports, arsenals, arms factories and industrial plants.

"Bomb hits, fires, bomb craters, destroyed houses, planes, tremendous detonations and high columns of fire show the work of the German bombers," declared the official German news agency, DNB, in a proud running description.

Thunder of Cannon.
"There is air alarm after air alarm, the howl of sirens and the thunder of cannon in London. 'Extensive fighting is in progress. The British are exerting every effort to halt the German attack. One recognizes clearly in the English defense that they

General Urges Speed in Supplying Additional Manpower.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP)—General George C. Marshall described as "critical" today the situation facing the United States as a result of the climactic developments of the European war. The army chief of staff told his press conference that he applied the term "critical" to "the possibilities of the next month, in the western hemisphere."

Referring to the debate in congress over compulsory military service, he asserted that "no one can say with certainty, the way things are going abroad, that we won't need the additional manpower without delay."

"Time is the dominant factor, and time is fleeting," General Marshall said.

Bodies of Air Raid Wardens Found in One Sector; Factory Burned, Windows Smashed Within Mile's Radius.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(AP)—I entered the bombed southwestern suburbs of London by motor car this evening, just after the mass German air raids, and the first sight I saw was two dead air raid wardens, lying on the ground in their tin hats and blue overalls.

One had been hit by a fragment of steel; the other didn't have a mark on him. I found a factory burned to the ground; windows within a mile's radius were smashed.

Several persons were killed when a bomb hit the ticket office of a railway station in one of the southwestern suburbs.

Outside one wrecked house a police constable stood guard. Inside were the bodies of his own stepdaughter and her seven-year-old daughter. It was his own home.

Machine-gun bullets hit a score of houses, chipping the walls and dislodging roof tiles.

The bombers flew in formation, dropping their loads of bombs in rapid succession.

Two men at work in a garage were killed, but two girl clerks in the adjoining office escaped uninjured.

A woman, who hurried home from the grocery when the raiders came, arrived just in time to be killed by a bomb.

One man said, "As soon as the raid started, I ran upstairs and got my wife, who is ill. I carried her to the passage. There was an explosion outside.

"The blast took me off my feet and the locks of the doors that were shut were completely smashed. The scullery door was blown

Nazi Bombers Raid Suburbs, Factories On Banks of Thames

Millions in City Flee to Shelters as Waves of Planes Approach; Invaders Return After Midnight.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 17. — (Saturday) — German bombers raided London's suburbs and both sides of the Thames yesterday in the mighty Nazi aerial offensive intended to crush these islands, but the main section of this capital of Empire was untouched.

At least 71 of the invaders were declared shot down here and elsewhere over Britain.

All day long the Kingdom had been pounded by a vast fleet of some 2,500 German bombers and fighters.

The British defended this heart of the homeland with a savage efficiency; their own losses were put at only 18 planes and it was said that the pilots of 10 of these were safe.

After the battle was all over, British sources declared it had proved that Britain—with her 400-mile-an-hour fighter planes and her anti-aircraft—still controlled the English skies despite the week-long efforts of thousands upon thousands of German planes to win a mastery of the air.

Yesterday brought the greatest test yet seen.

Bombs fell on the great dockside at Tilbury and on a British airdrome in the Isle of Wight.

Millions Take to Cover.
They fell, too, within eight miles of the vast domed St. Paul's cathedral in east-central London and upon the Thames estuary with its heavy shipping and industrial facilities.

There were casualties—an undisclosed list of dead and injured, and there was damaged residential property.

This ancient city's millions twice had to take cover—once at luncheon; again just at tea-time.

(From 10:30 o'clock in the morning to 3:19 in the afternoon, Atlanta time, not a line of information dealing with the London raid was allowed to be transmitted by the censor.)

The air ministry reported that in air attacks all over Britain the Nazis used as many as 150 planes in individual raids and said the day's biggest success was that of a single British Hurricane squadron in shooting down 11 Junkers bombers.

Fighter planes were not alone in the struggle: the hoarse bellow of "archies"—anti-aircraft guns—filled the skies.

From the far-scattered wreckage bodies were being brought forth tonight.

German planes flew over Wales early today. Bombs were dropped in one town and several casualties were reported.

The British reported that the far-ranging German raiders, who kept up their forays over southern England last night and early today, dropped bombs "at many points in the country districts of Hertfordshire, Essex, Surrey, Hampshire and Oxfordshire. Little damage was done. . . . Reports indicate . . . the number of killed was small."

British Bomb Italy, Germany; Swiss Hear Planes Pass Again

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(UP)—British Royal Air Force bombers, in a fierce counter-offensive against Germany's aerial assaults, are heaping destruction on Italian and German military objectives over virtually all of western Europe, the air ministry reported tonight.

Following up attacks on Italian aviation plants Tuesday night, another fleet of bombers returned to Turin and Milan Thursday night, bombed the Fiat and Caproni airplane works and a large blast furnace near Genoa on the Italian coast, an air ministry communique said.

(An air alarm sounded in Zurich, Switzerland, tonight indicated that British bombing planes might again be flying over to attack objectives in Italy.)

Simultaneous with the 1,600-mile bombing assault across the Alps, other strong forces of bombers were said to have attacked German munitions plants, oil depots and airdromes in Germany, Holland, Belgium and France with great success.

Bombs were dumped on oil plants in Gelsenkirchen and Reisholz and munitions factories in Lunen, Gladbach and Dusseldorf as well as crowded wharves at Elmerich and supply depots in Hamm and Soest.

Several airdromes in France, Holland and Germany again were attacked, it was said, and the Dutch naval base of Den Helder, now held by the Germans, was attacked.

"The aircraft shot down an enemy seaplane; three of our aircraft are missing," the air ministry said.

(In Rome, the Italian high command said two persons were killed and five wounded in the raids Thursday night.)

Churchill Offers Islands to U. S. for Bases, Says London Report

Ship-Islands 'Trade' Denied By Roosevelt

Proposed Sales Not Involved in Negotiations for Bases, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(UP)—President Roosevelt revealed today that the United States is seeking to strengthen western hemispheric defenses, especially those of the vital Panama Canal, through acquisition of naval and air bases from the British empire and in separate negotiations with Canada.

He said at a press conference that proposals for sale of 50 over-age United States destroyers to Britain are not involved in the negotiations. He would not say whether the government proposes to buy or lease the bases, but said he personally is conducting the conversations.

He modified this statement slightly when he voluntarily suggested to correspondents that they could quote him directly. "The United States government is holding conversations with the British empire with regard to acquisition of naval and air bases for the defense of the western hemisphere and especially the Panama Canal," he said.

After a brief pause he added: "The United States government is carrying on conversations with the Canadian government on the defense of the western hemisphere."

Both statements were preceded by the President's disclosure that Major General DeLoe, commandant of the general headquarters air force, and Brigadier ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN EN ROUTE TO NORWOOD, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP)—President Roosevelt followed up his announcement that the Canadian and United States governments were discussing "the defense of the American hemisphere" by disclosing tonight that Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, of Canada, would dine with him tomorrow night at Ogdensburg, New York.

General George B. Strong, assistant chief of staff, in charge of the war plans division, had gone to England at the invitation of the British government to act as observers of the war. It was the first action that the high-ranking officers had been sent abroad and Mr. Roosevelt refused further information about their departure. It had been previously announced that Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, assistant chief of naval operations, and his staff had gone to England to observe hostilities.

The chief executive refused to identify the British possessions in the western Atlantic involved in the negotiations. It is understood, however, that they include Trinidad, which lies off the Venezuelan coast; Bermuda, 780 miles southeast of New York, and Jamaica.

Fragile Link.
The area which these islands embrace has been regarded by military authorities as a fragile link in Panama Canal defenses. Absence of naval or air bases in this territory leaves virtually an unprotected entrance to Atlantic approaches of the canal.

The northern channels through the West Indies into the Caribbean are partly guarded. American naval and air bases on the east coast of Florida guard the channel between Florida and Cuba and these defenses are being expanded. The American naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, partly protects the channel from Cuba to the island occupied by the Dominican republic.

The Puerto Rican channel will be safeguarded when fortifications now under way are completed. By fortifying the southern passage, the entire Caribbean would be closed off and render especially hazardous the approach of invading naval, air or land forces closer than 1,000 miles from the canal.

The President's conversations with Canada were regarded as further evidence of his belief that the Dominion comes under the Monroe Doctrine.

Defense Pact Seen.
The present conversations with the Dominion, some observers felt, might result in an agreement or an understanding that one country would go to the aid of another in the event either is attacked.

Congressional circles report that the administration is discussing an outright defensive alliance with Canada.

Isolationists criticized the proposed acquisition of bases on British territory but congressional reaction generally was favorable. Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, North Dakota, leader of the isolationists, said "We certainly do not want to extend our frontiers any further than they are now on a half basis or on a whole basis."

Senator Pepper, one of the first to urge the sale of the destroyers to Britain and exponent of all aid short of war to that beleaguered country, said the President was following "in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessor, Thomas Jefferson."

Chairman Andrew J. May, Democrat, Kentucky, of the Military Affairs Committee, said he was "100 per cent for it" and hoped the negotiations would be concluded quickly. Chairman Carl Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, said "We should do everything in our power to strengthen the defense of the Panama Canal to the point of making it impregnable."

2,500 Nazi Planes Sweep Over England

King George Pays Tribute to Men of Royal British Air Force.

By WALLACE CARROLL.
LONDON, Aug. 16.—(UP)—A great air fleet of German bombers and fighters swept over the Thames upon London late yesterday, bombing the great Tilbury docks and southwestern suburbs, but did not reach the heart of this besieged metropolis.

British Spitfire and Hurricane fighters, with guns blazing, "turned back" the mass assault before it could reach London proper, it was stated officially. Blasting their way across the barricaded coasts, between 2,000 and 2,500 Nazi planes swept inland and "a large force" succeeded in breaking through to London where they were finally defeated and driven off in air battles, the air ministry said.

Little Damage.
In contrast to blaring announcements of the German radio that "devastation" had been heaped upon the London area by an armada of 700 or more specially picked planes, a United Press survey tonight indicated that little damage and few casualties had been inflicted.

From Tilbury the raiders swerved around London over the southeastern environs—without dropping bombs—and on around to the southwestern outskirts without venturing near the heart of the city where swarms of British fighter planes hovered on the alert.

More than 50 German planes were knocked down during the day against the loss of 12 British fighters, the pilots of eight of which escaped with their lives for further battles, the air ministry said.

Dead Along Thames.
There were dead and injured along the Thames, in the London suburbs and along the southern and southeast coasts, it was admitted, but no casualty figures were available.

King George VI tonight paid tribute to the men of the Royal Air Force.

"I, like all their compatriots, read with ever-increasing admiration the stories of their daily victories," he said in a message to Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair.

Among the dead in the bombings of the southwestern suburbs were several persons buried when a garage was blasted.

Berlin Evokes Derision.
The German radio's claims that the harbor district of London had been "devastated" and that German planes were "dancing over London" where huge fires blazed on both sides of the Thames evoked loud derision in London.

A person standing in Piccadilly Circus at the height of the German aerial fury could see no raiders, and hear no gunfire.

The people of London went on quietly about their affairs, just as they had yesterday when about 20 Nazi dive-bombers accompanied by fighters bombed Croydon airport on the southern outskirts of London, about six miles from London's center.

Crowds at Theater.
Tonight there were large crowds at theaters and restaurants and Hyde and Green parks were filled with strollers, most of whom will be something of a shock when they read in Saturday morning's papers the German accounts of the "great air battles over London."

Some British officials said they believed the extravagant German version of the assault might be intended by Adolf Hitler to convince Spain and Japan that the Nazi air force is "annihilating" Britain and therefore that it is time for them to join the war against Britain.

A motorist was blown out of his car and severely injured when bombs crashed in a roadway along the coast where the homeward-bound Nazi junkers evidently were trying to lighten their loads by getting rid of their left-over bombs.

Britons going home from work heard fierce air battles being fought high overhead.

British fighters were everywhere, filling the skies, tackling the waves of raiders and in many instances chasing them back toward the coast whence they had come.

The German air armada swept inland in waves of 200 to 300 planes, suffering losses described as enormous.

Constant Dogfights.
Along the southeast and south coast British fighter patrols were engaged with the Nazi raiders in constant dogfights over a scattered area of hundreds of square miles.

Before they could finish tackling one flight of bombers another would come roaring across the channel. Reports of air battles and the downing of Nazi planes flashed in so rapidly that it was difficult to tabulate them.

In many places, it was reported, planes fell at the rate of one a minute, fluttering down like broken birds or plummeting in flames.

Shortly before evening a flight of heavy German bombers was heard over southeast England. British fighters zoomed up to the attack as the German armada swept on inland, apparently toward the London area.

More Bombers Come.
Later still more German bombers came over the southeast coast, bombing many towns and fighting air battles almost every mile of the way.

And there the crews of crippled German bombers and fighters were seen bailing out to save their lives.

German planes first appeared over London shortly after noon and a fleet of Hurricane fighters took after them, pursuing them over the outskirts.

Air raid sirens screamed, sending many persons to underground shelters for the second time in 48 hours.

Preceding the mass attack, other British fighter squadrons had chased German planes which flew over the outskirts of the metropolitan area.

British fighter squadrons operated out at sea in order to fall on the German attackers as they headed back to their French bases, attempting to shoot them down at a point where German ammunition and gasoline would be low.

One group of 30 Junkers dive-bombers was attacked in a similar manner and it was confirmed that seven of them were brought down. The German air force continues to enjoy a three-to-one numerical advantage over the RAF, it was stated by neutral air observers, and despite its heavy losses of the past week, amounting to 500 or more planes, the German air force still probably can place up to 5,000 planes in the air for a single day's assault.

London Saved In Savage Fight High Over City

tering place, is on the English channel in Sussex.

The invading Nazi struck at London in two big flying columns.

The first was split by the defending British and part of that wave was turned back before reaching the city's outskirts. The remaining bombers, racing above the Thames estuary, bombed it on both sides—hitting both the Tilbury docks and the Northfleet section across the estuary, the site of big cement works 13 miles from London. Here an undetermined number of dead was left.

The German column sped on then around the southeast of the city but dropped no bombs, said the air ministry.

Later, fresh Nazi squadrons roared up the estuary, losing bombs in the southwestern suburbs.

(The Germans claimed to have bombed the populous east side of London and the northern and western suburbs as well.)

The first casualties found by an Associated Press correspondent in the southwestern area were two dead air raid wardens. One had been struck by a bomb fragment; the other showed no mark.

A factory had been burned to the ground; windows within the radius of a mile were smashed; two saloons were wrecked; train service in the section was dislocated but quickly restored.

The air ministry and the ministry of home security said that German planes made a deliberate attack upon the residential town of Eastbourne and killed several people.

Eastbourne is on the south English coast, between Brighton and Hastings.

Stealthy Approach.
The approach of the raiding bombers—an approach which because of censorship could not be told for five hours—was stealthy. They came at a high altitude, too high to be seen at first.

The first wave—only part of which reached the city—had crossed the southeast coast several hundred strong. Those able to break through and reach the London outskirts appeared to be avoiding the heart of the metropolitan area. Gunfire was heard in the suburbs across the city toward the western edge, and the boom of heavier explosives came from distant regions.

Many Londoners stood on their rooftops in an unsuccessful effort to see the action. Throughout the day the islands had been blasted by a vast fleet of some 2,500 German planes.

The Great Showdown.
And then, as Germany unleashed to London and the world that more were yet to come, this capital of empire itself was drawn into the theater of action—the theater of the great showdown.

Aside from the metropolitan area, the raiding Nazis sprayed Britain with explosives from Scotland to the south coast of England and from Wales on the west to the east coast.

They struck again and again at industrial areas, shipping, air-dromes—at every point of British resistance in what seemed an obvious effort to break Britain from the air in a plan of strategy which, if successful, would avoid the great risk of trying an invasion across the English channel.

So great, so widespread, so thunderous was this aerial invasion that none could say how many thousands of planes were at grips.

But aside from the mighty waves that had beaten all day at the country, fresh flying columns were sent later—"especially selected," according to Berlin's world broadcast.

It was the sixth successive day of mass raids over England—raids that every day have grown in ferocity—and by mid-afternoon it already had far outdone Thursday's attack, the biggest in history.

Nearly all over Britain airplanes fell from the tortured skies. It was, as Thursday, an engagement so big as to be difficult to encompass: At one southeastern town alone, at one time, 400 German raiders were counted as they swept across the coastal frontier. The count was lost there; they came on and on after that.

Britain was being assaulted as never before—assaulted as never any country, great or small, ever was assaulted—but the Royal Air Force took comfort in the knowledge that the acknowledged numerically superior air power of the invader was suffering heavily, too.

In Thursday's engagements alone, the British announced the destruction of 169 German planes against the loss of 34 of their own. On and on last evening this score was rising.

A dispatch here, another there—they were all brief and left much to be known, but they told of casualties among men and women who never were combatants in this strangest of all the invasions ever attempted in the long march of Britain's centuries.

Factories were smashed; homes burst apart under the falling bombs.

These isolated incidents illustrate a story that could not be told in entirety:

In a west coast town, a boarding school suddenly crumbled; a boy was dug out, dead; others were missing.

Death Trap in Shelter.
Across the country in the southeast, a household taking the air in his suburban garden was smashed to death under a falling German bomber.

In the midlands, anxious men and women hurried to a home-made shelter. It was not a good shelter: a single bomb tore it asunder and several—no one knew how many—died there.

In the same town, two elderly women would go to no shelter. A bomb fell on their house; one died; the other was so injured that she may not live.

In the working class section of a southeastern town, bombs fell in a school playground and a single residence rocked violently and then settled in a mass of splinters. People—nobody knew how many—were trapped in that house—obscure and nameless victims.

There were so many battles that count was lost in the growing fury of the struggle, but these were among the many hard-hit areas: The great industrial midlands; the northwest, the southeast, the southwest, the north, the west.

know that everything is at stake—their very existence.

"Tenaciously the English and Germans tie into one another until one plane or the other shoots off to destruction. A trail of smoke is the last badge of a heroism that was.

"Here and there, billowing parachutes and the yellow puffs from anti-aircraft explosions float through the air.

"German scouts, observing from a great height, are giving reports on developments."

The industrial east end of London was the teeming object of attack, the Germans said.

The squalid Cockney section, a vast beehive of docks, sprawling warehouses, factories and arsenals, lay under a pall of smoke, the raiders reported.

Explosions plumed up from Barking and Purfleet, crowded east end industrial suburbs, said DNB. Both are on the north bank of the Thames some eight miles from Charing Cross. (Purfleet has been the site of a powder magazine in the past; Barking is barely 2-1/2 miles from the great Royal Albert docks. The Royal Arsenal at Woolwich is just across the river.

The raiders met a hot fight from British fighter planes over both the channel coast and over London, but a late report said two German fighter squadrons had "cleared the air" over London.

Authorized sources said the raiders' objectives were outlying "arsenals, warehouses and refrigerating plants" and asserted the center of London would be spared.

Plan's Details Believed Sent To Roosevelt

99-Year Leases Said Proposed To Strengthen Hemisphere Defenses

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill was reported tonight to have formally offered President Roosevelt 99-year leases on all British islands between Newfoundland and Guiana for use as air and naval bases.

Churchill's offer, understood to have been outlined in a message cabled to Mr. Roosevelt a few days ago, was believed to include Trinidad, Barbados, Newfoundland and Guiana.

When Mr. Roosevelt stated that he had in mind the acquisition of naval bases from Britain which would be especially useful for defense of the Panama Canal he was believed here to have referred to the islands in the Caribbean including Trinidad, Barbados and Bermuda.

Simultaneous talks with Canada, announced by the President, presumably envisage the acquisition of outposts against possible German air attacks from Ireland, Greenland, and Iceland with Newfoundland as a possible intermediate landing place.

It was said authoritatively that if the United States suggested leasing such bases the suggestion would be received sympathetically and "with interest."

"It is untrue to suggest that the question of selling any islands has arisen," these sources added, however. "It is also incorrect to hint the discussion of island bases with the transfer of United States destroyers to Britain."

Reports in Washington that Great Britain might exchange some of her western hemisphere holdings for age-old United States destroyers probably arose from the discussion of United States use of West Indian airport and harbor facilities, it was said.

Major Ulysses J. L. Peoples Jr., arsenal adjutant and public relations officer, said that only 98 men who are qualified for approximately 3,000 vacancies in various skilled worker classifications have been found in a week-long search.

The jobs were opened up through an order a week ago by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson placing army arsenals on a 24-hour day production basis.

Road Board Opens Bids on 3 Projects

Bids on three construction projects estimated to cost $186,691 were opened by the Georgia Highway Board yesterday. The low bids totaled $182,460.

The Claussen-Lawrence Construction Co., of Augusta, was the apparent low bidder with $43,439 for surfacing 4.9 miles of the Collins-Manassas road in Talmadge county. The Hardaway Contracting Co., Columbus, was apparent low bidder at $44,839 for surfacing 7.2 miles of the Montezuma-Vienna highway in Macon and Dooly counties.

C. Y. Thomason Co., Greenwood, S. C., bidding $98,411, was apparently low on construction of an underpass and concrete approaches on the old Atlanta-Marietta highway at Bolton.

TO THE CITIZENS OF DEKALB COUNTY:

As you well know, the Police Department of your County do not participate in politics, local or state, other than the individual voting his convictions as any other citizen. Notwithstanding this well-known policy on the part of the Police Department, there have been rumors that the department was opposed to the re-election of Sheriff J. R. (Jake) Hall.

As this rumor is utterly false and without foundation, we feel that it is our duty, as well as in justice to Sheriff Hall, to state to the citizens of his County that there has never been the slightest friction between the Sheriff's office and our Department, and, further, we can testify that Sheriff Hall has made a capable and efficient officer, co-operating with our Department at all times.

While the Department cannot endorse any candidate for office, the following officers, of their own free will, as individuals, have endorsed Sheriff Jake Hall for re-election.

Camp Meeting At Salem Will End Tomorrow

Descendants of Founders To Assemble at Morning Service.

Climax of the 114th annual Salem Camp Meeting will be reached tomorrow. The descendants of the founders of this historic old camp ground will assemble at the 11 o'clock hour for a homecoming and reunion.

It has been planned to administer the sacrament of the Lord's Supper at this service, but physical difficulties have made it necessary to dispense with this part of the program.

Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, of Atlanta, will preach the morning sermon. The afternoon services will be conducted by Dr. Bascom Anthony, of Macon, veteran of the South Georgia Methodist conference. The closing sermon, at 8 o'clock Sunday night, will be preached by Dr. Charles L. King, Presbyterian minister of Houston, Texas.

The musical programs for each session will be under the direction of Major Sidney C. Cox, of the Salvation Army.

Talmadge Hints For Opponent To Quit Race

Suggests Other Candidates Flip Coin To See Who Withdraws.

By LUKE GREENE.

The question of whether one or more of Georgia's gubernatorial candidates would withdraw from the race was raised last night by Eugene Talmadge in a radio address as the candidates continued their drives for votes in widely separated sections of the state.

He described his opponents as "walking the plank"—Talmadge planks—on all issues, but wondering whether it wouldn't be better after all to jump out of the race entirely.

Talmadge asserted that a little coin-flipping might "ease the distressed minds of Messrs. Nix, Roberts and Howell by settling the question of who would leave the race."

"It doesn't make any difference which one retires," he said. "The result will be the same anyway on September 11."

Speaking in Statesboro, Roberts charged that the Barwick suit filed in Atlanta over state farmers' market leases was "cooked up" in the campaign headquarters of one of his lawyer-opponents.

"These same charges have been brought twice before and each time the supreme court of Georgia has decided in my favor, as recorded in the supreme court reports," Roberts said.

Hugh Howell made three speeches yesterday—in Carnesville, Hartwell and Elberton. In his Elberton speech he promised to bring "reason and moderation" back into state government.

In Lincoln Abit Nix explained his proposal to create 10 district veterans' service offices to augment the one state office now existing, saying such a plan would enable the veteran to present more properly and quickly his claims for compensation.

Roberts announced in a statement that he had not used the Market Bulletin for printed political matter, thereby carrying out his pledge made at the outset of his campaign.

Check Urged On Condition of School Buses

Sullivan Says One-Sixth of Machines Inspected Are Unsafe.

With the opening of school less than a month away, Major Lon Sullivan, safety commissioner, yesterday urged that school buses be put in "first-class condition."

Inspection made by troopers

during the 1939-1940 term revealed that more than a sixth of the children transported in buses traveled in unsafe machines. Of the 2,160 vehicles inspected, 943 were approved, 1,068 were found to be in need of repair, and 149 were actually unsafe, Major Sullivan said.

He explained that troopers can make inspections and recommendations only but that action requiring repairs is left, by law, with school authorities. He said the buses traveled 93,066 miles daily, 78,420 miles of which were over dirt roads. More than two-thirds of the machines were privately owned, and 990 were home-made jobs.

Almost 500 machines were found to have bad brakes; 120 had unsound tires; 479 had no windshield wipers; 2,104 were unequipped with fire extinguishers; 1,882 lacked "stop" signs painted on the rear; 1,489 were not equipped with safety glass; 46 lacked good clutches; 105 had gas tank leakages; 283 were not free of gas fumes; 156 had defective steering gears; 67 had unsafe chassis, and 445 lacked emergency exits. Moreover, there was a total seating capacity of only 106,701 for the 132,297 children who rode the buses.

TAX RATE INCREASED.

SPARTA, Ga., Aug. 16.—(AP)—The tax rate in Hancock county has been increased from 12 to 15 mills by the county board of roads and revenues, Clerk G. Lee Dickens announced.

'Meanest Man' Candidate Found

Bob Sturgis, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sturgis, 1501 Stokes avenue, S. W., and a graduate of Georgia Tech, yesterday had a candidate for the title of "the world's meanest man."

Several days after his graduation from Tech this summer, young Sturgis misplaced his fountain pen, a graduation present on which was engraved his name.

He had a telephone call, telling him if he would come by one of the city's railway terminals the pen would be there for him. Sturgis went, the pen was not there and he has heard nothing else about it.

"I think it was a dirty trick to make me think I was going to find my lost pen, and then not leave it," he asserted.

Encouragement

The overwhelming vote by which the house passed the National Guard mobilization bill comes as a ray of encouragement to a nation which is rapidly becoming surfeited with the inexplicable tactics of that group of senators who are opposing the compulsory military service bill in the upper branch of congress.

By vote of 342 to 33 the house passed the measure which permits the President to call out the National Guard for a year's service anywhere in the western hemisphere, the American possessions and the Philippine islands. An attempt to limit the area of possible service to the continental United States was quickly voted down.

The bill has now been passed by both houses. A few minor amendments adopted by the house must be agreed to by the senate, or compromised between the two houses. All that will then stand in the way of making the bill a law, will be the signature of the President. This, there is no doubt, will be promptly affixed.

While the threat against the American continents daily becomes more serious, as the fate of Britain hangs, day by day, in the balance, it has been hard for most loyal citizens of the United States to wait, impatient, while a little group of blind isolationists in the senate have thrown away precious days on obstructionist debate of the conscription bill. Few informed men and women in this country who do not realize that there may come a day, soon, when those few days of delay will spell the difference between a United States still free, still democratic and a United States bound inexorably to the wheels of the Nazi juggernaut.

The very safety of the United States and everyone in it depends upon quick creation of an army, an air force and a navy large enough, strong enough and sufficiently trained to keep away from the shores of America, north or south, an entire world, if need be. Two-ocean navy, great enough to take and keep command of the two oceans, cannot be built in less than four or six years. Men to man those new ships must also be recruited and trained.

Tens of thousands of airplanes are necessary. President Roosevelt has set the figure at 50,000, with an annual production capacity of 50,000. Army and aviation experts have, any of them, set the absolute minimum required higher than this. To build such a quantity of planes and to train the pilots, gunners and navigators to man them, will again take several years.

In the meantime, army leaders want to equip and to train at least 1,000,000 men at once. Senate delays have already forced postponement of the earliest possible date when this training can begin, to January next. Defense industry is pushing ahead fast. Airplane manufacturers are risking many millions of dollars on the purchase of machine tools, on expansion of plant, although congress has not yet taken any steps to protect them against heavy loss when the defense program is complete.

Army equipment plants are expanding, large contracts are being let. Yet all the equipment in the world is useless without the men to man it.

Voluntary enlistment will not do. Today, through the pages of history, it has been over time and again that a modern army cannot be raised on the voluntary enlistment method.

Some obstructionists have sought to delay description by proposing an increase in basic pay for the army. No one would object to giving the defenders of the nation a larger monthly wage. But to suggest that enlistments should be based upon an offer of nine dollars per month, is to insult American manhood and to make of patriotism a sordid thing that can be bought for a few cents a week.

America does not want, nor need, an army of mercenaries. What she needs and has the right to expect, is an army of patriots.

Selective draft—conscription—is the only fair and democratic way of raising an army. It places all men of army age and physical acceptability, on equal basis. It is the co-operative organization of the nation's man power to meet an emergency.

An overwhelming majority of the people want the conscription bill passed. Regardless of age, of political affiliation, of sectional origin, two of every three people in the country see the need, recognize the fearful emergency and consider those who delay little better than traitors.

The vote of the house on the Guard mobilization bill gives encouragement that congress, after all, has seen the danger. Perhaps, now, they'll hurry the conscription bill in order that the nation may never have to say, between it's tears, "it came too late!"

The Fuehrer can make a final peace offer sound more belligerent than a declaration of war. That trampling sound, of late, was the dove, again on the march.

Needed, at Once

The approval here by Robert McDougall, WPA administrator, of the new Camp Gordon airport apparently assures an early start on this vital project, already delayed too long. It is to be hoped that authorities in Washington will hasten final approval and that the work at the new field will be started before fall weather sets in.

This new field will greatly enhance the value to Atlanta and the south of Candler field, and the extension of this latter airport to provide safer landings for the large planes now in service, and the larger ones to come, should regain for this city a commanding place in southern aviation. This position has been endangered for several years by the failure to extend Candler field runways and by congestion at the airport arising from its joint use for commercial and private flying facilities.

An effort also is being made to provide still a third large airport in south Fulton county, and this project also should be pursued immediately. It is evident there will be more than enough flying activity in and near Atlanta to assure full use of the three fields within the very near future. All three should also be prepared for use as military fields in the event of necessity. This, it may be noted, involves turfing and other preparation of the entire landing field, together with provision of facilities for fueling from protected tanks.

It is essential that all officials and citizens of the Atlanta area, whether in Fulton or DeKalb counties, extend the utmost co-operation in the provision of the new fields. They are vital to the entire metropolitan section—possibly to the entire south in a time of emergency—and call for the greatest possible amount of co-ordination.

Naturally, freedom for India would destroy one of the great key industries of that tumultuous land, to wit: The campaign for a free India.

Is This Good Omen?

To those who wish Great Britain well in her present titanic struggle against the "dark curse of Hitler," the recurrence of the letter B on blades of Canadian oats comes as a welcome portent. It comes as a welcome sign to millions of Americans, no less than to millions of English people. For the letter B is a good omen, according to past performances.

The letter B mysteriously appeared on blades of Canadian oats during the dark war days of 1917. To the Canadians, and Englishmen throughout the empire, it came as Nature's forecast of victory. Now, natives of the provinces where the B has come once more are elated at the recurrence of this seemingly uncanny omen.

Residents of the town of Westboro were at first skeptical when news of the B came. But examination by the owner of the farm where the oats were grown, and by representatives of the press, has verified the phenomenon. On every fourth blade nature has placed, for all to see, a plain letter B. For Britain, of course.

In Hitler's Germany, the move is on to abolish regular beer. Surely there are less drastic ways of obviating another barroom explosion in Munich.

Editorial of the Day

DISCRIMINATION IS NEEDED

(From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

J. Edgar Hoover's list of some of the forms of Fifth Column sabotage to national defense, actual and projected, is a shocking thing.

The director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation told a national conference of federal and state law enforcement agencies in Washington recently that government agents had found emery dust in airplane motors and destructive metal in the power plants of naval vessels. FBI agents, he added, had discovered plans to place chemicals in boilers, "with the idea of creating wholesale destruction." Incendiary bombs no longer than a cigar have been designed, he said.

There is only one thing to do with such treachery, and that is to stamp it out and make its perpetrators pay the penalty of the law.

However, the FBI doubtless sees that it must distinguish between philosophical dissenters and saboteurs. The political thinker who disagrees with prevailing ideas is not a traitor. His rights under the United States Constitution. The Bill of Rights specifically guarantees freedom of thought and expression. Obviously, that is what we are arming ourselves to protect. If in our zealotry we trample human rights, we have lost what we seek to shield before we are called to fire a shot for their defense.

Every plotter against the national defense and the safety of workers in manufacturing plants and utilities should be landed in prison as speedily as he can be apprehended and convicted under the law. But those who merely differ on political theory should be carefully protected against both official and private injustices. The situation calls for discrimination of the most searching sort.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE DARK DAYS AHEAD WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The first days of the German onslaught against England have not lightened the extreme gloom prevailing here among the men best qualified, both by information and experience, to judge the course of the war. The present violent air warfare is regarded as a preliminary phase, intended to test the English defenses, and to indicate which of the several alternate German plans of attack will be most effective.

As this is written, the results of these first days are not considered encouraging. Soon, very soon, it is thought, will come the main action. It may take the form of attempted invasion of England. It may take some other form. But the odds are now quoted at even that, when the main action comes, the English resistance will be broken.

BLUEPRINTS OF DISASTER (1) Pulverization from the air is the first of the three German plans most commonly discussed. Both in numbers of planes and pilots, the German air force is estimated to be from two and a half to three times as strong as the English. The last days have not convinced American observers that the plane-for-plane, man-for-man superiority claimed by the English is sufficient to overcome the German advantage by brute numbers.

If this simplest of the German plans is followed, the present air attacks will be continued with greater intensity. The Germans will try to keep virtually the entire Royal Air Force continuously in the air, while maintaining their own reserves of men and material. Then, after the English pilots have been drained of endurance, and after as many English planes as possible have been brought down, the entire German air force will attack at once, simply overwhelming the English air defense. And once the defending planes have been grounded or destroyed, the Germans can do to all England what they did to Rotterdam, where a square mile of the city was leveled and thousands of people were killed by two flights of bombers in the space of a few minutes. If this plan succeeds, England will cease to exist.

(2) Occupation of "siege points" around England under cover of an air attack is the plan considered most likely to be employed by a majority of the experts. As has already been reported in this space, huge concentrations of men, planes and other war material have been observed in Norway. These are thought to be intended for use in capturing the Orkney, Shetland and Faroe islands.

If German bases can be effectively established on these islands, the outcome of the air battle over England will cease to be important. For plottings and sinkings of major English cargo ships show that the bulk of England's food and supplies is already being brought in to west coast ports through the north channel of the Irish sea. The obvious meaning of this is that air and submarine attacks have already made St. George's channel, to the south, too dangerous for large convoys. With the Orkneys, Shetlands and Faroes in their possession, the Germans will have bases to close the north channel also. And with the west coast ports rendered useless, England will starve.

(3) The invasion of England may have been attempted before these words are printed, but, as they are written, despite the talk of "blitzkriegs," invasion is not on the list by the experts. If invasion is the chosen plan, the Germans will try to pulverize only a comparatively small area near the English channel. Simultaneously, they will try to establish control of the air over the channel, and to drive all defending vessels out of the narrow waters where a crossing will be easy. If these preparations are successful, they will then proceed to establish a bridgehead on England's soil. With a bridgehead established, large forces can be landed for a military conquest.

FEW DAYS WILL TELL It is not pleasant to contemplate these three plans, or their possible results. Indeed, it is not pleasant to think at all about what is now happening across the Atlantic. Yet, unless the ablest and best-informed men in the government have gone collectively insane, it is time to realize that any one of these three plans, or some other combination or variant of the three, may be successful, not in a few months or a few weeks, but quite literally in a few days. For there are able officers who predict that the English will have lost the air battle, the determining factor, after eight or nine days of intensified German attack.

Observers like Colonel William Donovan and Count Rene De Chambrun, as well as the American attaches in London who report the English point of view, are infinitely less gloomy than the men in the departments here. They place their emphasis on such English advantages as morale, the excellent land defenses established in the last months, and the onset of unfavorable weather and tide conditions. Unfortunately, there is nothing to show, as yet, that brute force of military equipment will not be more important. But a few days will probably show who is right.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Reminder Of Boyhood.

When I was a boy in England one of the favorite periodicals that came into my home was The British Weekly. Primarily a religious publication, this paper nevertheless had splendid editorials of general interest and some of the finest commentaries and essays were proud to see their work in its columns.

I hadn't seen a copy of The British Weekly for years until a portion of the June 27, 1940, issue was sent through the mail by some unidentified friend here. In typography and make-up it looks exactly as it did 40 years ago.

I was especially interested in an essay written by one "Ilico," which deals with the duty of Christian Britons if England is invaded. It is Ilico's argument that Britain is still unprepared, mentally and spiritually, for invasion. Military preparations, he adds, is the business of the High Command, not his.

After admitting that Nazi invasion of England, in one form or another, is probable, Ilico lists the three methods by which the enemy effort may reach the general civilian population. By bombing, by parachutists, or by "rumors" spread by Fifth Columnists.

"The Duty Of Placidity."

"If we are in an area which is the victim of bombing or of parachutists or of rumors only," he writes, "I can imagine that nothing will be more important than that the Christians remain placid and peaceful and sure of God. That will be our duty both as disciples of Christ and as patriotic citizens. It will not be easy for most of us, and it may well prove impossible unless we have faced the worst on our knees with God and have risen up fearless and confident by faith."

"Who have we got to fear? Let us look it in the face. We must contemplate the possibility of the loss of our worldly possessions, and there is the possibility that we or our loved ones may be killed."

"I do not think that any man can look at either of these possibilities without deep heart-searching. No man who has a home, and perhaps a business, of his own, will think lightly of its loss. But, after all, what have we been doing in church all these years and in our Christian profession, if we have not said and meant that we were ready and even glad to give up everything if Christ should ask it of us? How can Christians be either terror-stricken or heart-broken at any earthly loss? Worldly men may possess nothing but their worldly goods, but if we be Christians, worldly goods are the least part of our possessions. When Bishop Burnet asked the old woman if that crust was all she possessed, she said, 'All this—and Christ.' It belongs to our fallen nature to fear suffering, but it belongs to our redeemed nature to believe that through suffering we may cling closer to our Lord and enter more deeply into fellowship with Him.

"Then there is the possibility of death, and we are not yet tired of life. Or it may be those will be killed for whom we should be glad to die. We are apt to think of death as the last and worst disaster, but our Lord said, 'Have no fear of them that can only kill the body and after that have nothing that they can do.' We make, it seems, too much of death. And certainly death is not the worst that can befall those whom we love. What Christian father would not rather see his children killed by a bomb than know that from their tender and impressionable years they were being brought up to honor Hitler and his crooked cross?"

With a Grim Zest.

"Again, we recognize that soldiers must be killed in battle; are we not in danger of acting as if we supposed our civilian lives of greater value? We do not, or I think we should not, pity those who give their lives for a sacred cause—much more honor them. In no case for Christians is pity the right attitude towards the dead."

"And, as for our own death, well, we can but die once. We have, indeed, many dear bonds that link us with this fair world below, and many boys are sad at leaving school who yet look forward most eagerly to the new life beyond. We may measure the reality of our faith by the longing that we have for the Celestial City which, as we believe, we may by grace call 'home.' We may be very sure that God is able to keep that which we have committed to Him, both ourselves and those we love."

"Very well then, being persuaded that neither life nor death can separate us from the love of Christ, we have no cause to be alarmed by an air raid or a band of parachutists. We may keep a quiet eye, a steady hand, and we may be sure that we best both honor and serve our country by a calm serenity of spirit. How true and obvious this is! Yet we may say that as a nation we have never had to face that which now is coming on us. It is, please God, to be a great experience, grievous, no doubt, and a real trial of faith, but a new way will be shown to us by which we may bring us back as a nation in a new way to religion; it is to be unforgettable, and we hope, rather glorious. My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into manifold trials, and the issue of this trial, please God, shall be the liberation of the peoples."

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Tuesday, August 17, 1915: "WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The Allied intervention to declare cotton contraband has been communicated unofficially, but authoritatively, to the State Department."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Presenting A Letter

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—It is not my intention to crusade against Mrs. Roosevelt's ineligibility for membership in the American Newspaper Guild, which is a detached auxiliary of the Communist party. However, I would like to present and discuss a letter by James P. Kirby, chairman of the Cleveland Press unit of the guild, published in that paper, which bears on the guild.

"No one recognizes more than myself the futility of attempting to reply to the scurrilities of Westbrook Pegler, spokesman for at least a considerable branch of the organized newspaper publishers," he wrote. "Indeed, it would be impossible to descend to his level of vituperation. But the baseness of his attacks on Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, it seems to me, requires that certain facts be set forth for the record."

"Mrs. Roosevelt joined the guild on invitation. She became a member of the same local to which Pegler himself belonged, and the record does not disclose that at the time Pegler exercised his right as a member to protest her membership."

"Mrs. Roosevelt resigned from the D. A. R. when that organization grossly insulted one of the great artists of our day, Marian Anderson, by refusing her the privilege of singing before the record without recalling that Mr. Pegler's first column in his present capacity was a vigorous defense of lynching in America. And, finally, it is pertinent to recall that Pegler exercised nothing in attending the funeral of the late Heywood Brown within a few days after his most disgraceful diatribe against that great American while Brown lay on his death-bed."

Note that Mr. Kirby avoids discussion of the actual question whether Mrs. Roosevelt is eligible. He knows she is not, because newspaper work is not her principal occupation. However, I was pitching to his weakness there, for he must know also the Communist control in New York has added to its own strength by admitting many ineligible of Communist tinge for their sympathy and support.

Is This

Scurrility?

And, now, where was the scurrility? Is it scurrility to point out that Mrs. Roosevelt is here presuming to meddle in a struggle which is none of her business and on the side of an organization which is trying to drive out of the newspaper business every writer who declines to join an auxiliary of the Communist party? That was the gist of my two pieces on the subject.

I added the observation that here is journalism at a type of job which regular newspaper people reach only after many years of work was abrupt and synchronized with the election returns of 1932. Any argument on that?

Now let's see. So I am spokesman for a considerable branch of the organized newspaper publishers. The answer is that I am employed by only one paper and know probably not more than a dozen publishers. But Mr. Kirby is more tolerant of spokesmen of the Moscow government in the high official list of the organization of which he is also an officer.

It is true that I never protested Mrs. Roosevelt's membership. I didn't know then that the organization would go Communist and figured that this was just an honorary membership, anyway. However, I did twit when they barred General Johnson on the ground that he wasn't liberal enough.

As To

D. A. R.

As to Mrs. Roosevelt's resignation from the D. A. R., I can point out that she hasn't resigned from the Democratic party, which surely has been guilty of worse discriminations than the silly ban on Marian Anderson or, now, from the Newspaper Guild under Communist leadership.

All I didn't defend lynching in America, as reference to that piece will prove, and now I come to the last point raised by this gallant knight who objects to scurrility. In that point he lies. Heywood Brown was tough in controversy, and he was not on his knees and even sick when he reproduced out of his own writings his declaration of faith in Soviet Russia as "the greatest effort ever made for human betterment." Brown was well and working, and it was reasonable to assume that he would take advantage of his daily opportunity to justify a general endorsement to the Communist government. If Mr. Kirby denies that Brown was well and working at the time I will make him eat his lie.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

HITLER'S FIRST FIGHT Germany's planes are increasing their tempo of destruction as attrition depletes the British air force.

One may expect that some time next week the first assault by sea will come in the wake of thousands of bombers. Hitler cannot invade England until the RAF is destroyed or reduced to impotence. That explains the slow start of bombing; the growing intensity of the bombing, and now a sort of flaming, screaming crescendo, following the usual compositions of death from the air.

Once Germany believes the RAF is reduced in numbers of pilots and planes, the attack will come.

It will be Hitler's first fight. In Poland, where he met the first resistance, there was nothing to meet his mechanized forces. There also was betrayal from within.

In Poland, the Polish air force was destroyed within a few days by destruction of planes and airports. All the Polish airports were in open territory. Once the fields were bombed, the planes not destroyed still could not get into the air.

In Holland and Belgium there were no planes to meet the Germans. The British, with proper realism, kept most of their planes at home. The French had few. What few they did have did a good job. There is nothing in this war as yet to suggest the German pilot is a superior one.

The dramatic removal of British and French troops from Dunkirk, the only great military maneuver of the war, was accomplished only with the help of British planes.

Hitler's plans are apparent. He will blast away at England's harbors, factories, and especially will he blast at the airports, hangars and ammunition dumps.

When he believes the air force to be at least largely paralyzed, he will send his ships, torpedo boats, barges and other equipment across the channel, protected by the largest air armada ever seen—a probable 5,000 planes.

Then will come his first fight.

THE GERMAN SOLDIERS

German soldiers are good ones. They demonstrated that in the first World War. But the invasion of England is going to be different from anything the modern German soldier has met.

In Poland he met an ill-equipped soldier, protected by no mechanized forces.

In all other countries, even France, he met a demoralized army and people. The British morale is high. There is no danger the people of England will prove as abject as did the earlier foes of the Germans.

This is going to be his first fight.

Unfortunately, there is no real method of estimating what England has with which to meet it.

The censorship is such that all readers of war reports must be confused. The official communiques of the two nations are in such glaring conflict confusion inevitably results.

No one knows how many air fields England by now has put underground. Germany put hers underground five years ago. No one knows how many planes England has been able to build and buy.

More important, no one knows how many pilots she has been able to train to augment and replace. The pilots are the more important. Planes can be replaced in a much shorter time than pilots can be trained. This is the most hopeful aspect of the fighting in England. Those German planes which are brought down are real victories, because even though the pilots save themselves by parachute they are captured and lost to Germany.

Because of censorship there is no manner in which one can estimate the picture. England may have converted her pilots and her planes. England may have underground airfields which Germany cannot find. England may have many defenses prepared in the months of time she has had. Or, England may not. One cannot know.

Nor can one know the true picture in Germany. Disturbing is what we do know—that before the war began Germany had two or three times as many planes, two or three times as many pilots. The soldiers coming back to England from Dunkirk said: "Give us some planes and let us go back."

Now the tide of war gathers for an assault on the old shores of England.

It will be Hitler's first fight.

AND HERE AT HOME Many Americans have disliked England, while admiring the British, because of the leaders of England, whose greed and short-sighted selfishness lulled the whole nation into a soft complacency.

The same thing is happening to us.

Only a dolt will fail to see the whole picture must change if England is defeated.

Yet, those of us who cursed Chamberlain while he and Eden debated over the relative danger to the nation from Hitler, now see our own leaders debating over the dangers to our nation.

It must cause the totalitarian countries great glee to see "the disease of the democracies" paralyzing the plans for gear industry into action and to build an army.

We see Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie both playing politics with conscription. We see labor leaders refusing to recognize the crisis and opposing preparedness because they fear what may happen to some of their gains. We see others in other fields also joining in putting their own interests first, the nation second.

We have "Chamberlainism" here at home. And Hitler laughs.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My dear Louise:

There is a story—how true I don't know—that the present Queen of England, soon after her crowning, saw a uniformed man standing inside the palace door and asked him his business there.

When he could give no explanation, except that he was obeying orders, she started an investigation which led back through ancient records to the fact that another Queen—Elizabeth, perhaps—had once intended to use a soldier for some errand and had said to him: "Wait here."

The man waited till he was relieved and another was posted in his place, and other men had waited there through the centuries, never knowing why, but following the pattern set for them by authority.

We'd like to think such things couldn't happen now, but they do. The collapse of France left the famous British author, Somerset Maugham, among the refugees waiting transportation from the Riviera. There were many helpless people to be taken aboard ships—children, old people and bed-ridden invalids among them—and there was need of desperate haste, for bombers might come and submarines lurked off shore and soldiers were marching nearer every hour. Yet in this extremity, those poor people were required to go through the customs. Why? For no reason under heaven except that people going abroad had always been examined by the customs office.

Pattern thinking—which means following an old rut without thinking at all—has almost made an end of freedom. The rulers of free lands, thinking in terms of the past, were unable to adjust their minds to new realities; and the people, following the old "pattern thought" that men are great because they hold great office, waited respectfully while their leaders prepared their ruin.

Now our world—the pleasant, free, comfortable and wholesome world in which you grew up—is apparently nearing its end. If England goes down, we must change our whole scheme of things in order to survive in a world controlled by totalitarian powers.

If we follow the old thought patterns—if we are unable to adopt new ideas to keep pace with the new world, we'll go the way of the dinosaurs.

The future is yours, and you kids must start from scratch in your thinking. Accept nothing because it is usual; judge every idea by the test: "Will it work?" To remain free, you must flee from pattern thinking as from a plague.

Love,

Dudley Glass

Describes "Line" Used Nowaday's To Propose Marriage.

New highway map of Georgia has reached my desk. Dated as of July 1, 1940. Mostly heavy blue lines, indicating paved roads. Looks like a spider's web.

Digging into dusty files I brought up a highway map of 12 years ago.

There are heavy blue lines on that—but they are broken by white lines and cross-hatches and other "legends" showing roads ungraded, unpaved, under construction or whatnot. Few heavy blue lines ran from Atlanta to anywhere without one of those breaks.

Perhaps Atlanta, as the capital city and metropolis, is exceptionally fortunate. As it should be, I think. Nearly everybody in Georgia must come to Atlanta every now and then, on business or politics or pleasure bent.

As far as I can see, looking at the new map, a motorist can travel from Atlanta to almost any place in Georgia—or to adjoining states—without bothering about weather. There's a paved road to everywhere.

It took an awfully long time. In which Georgia was cursed out roundly by motorists from east and west who dreaded crossing Georgia, in the mud, to reach Florida.

Highways have been mixed up in politics since the first "turn-pikes" with their toll gates. They are now. They always will be.

Here to There.

Years ago I advocated, and received a lot of criticism, the completion of main highways across the state, north to south, east to west. Roads that started somewhere and wound up somewhere, without regard to local quarrels. Through highways. Well, we have them now. Though many a mile is worn out and must be "done all over."

There are numerous towns still "off the paving" and they are howling for relief. See the weekly newspapers. But they're getting it. Every new highway map shows another stretch of heavy blue line.

I had a chat with a traveling salesman a few days ago. He said he had driven more than a hundred thousand miles in Georgia in the last 12 months—and had never had to hit a dirt road. There's been a lot of politics in road building. Of course, I've seen it work through succeeding dynasties.

But, anyway, we're getting the roads. Even though the exorbitant gasoline tax has been diverted to other ends. It has been the plaything of the legislators.

If all that money the motorist has paid had been devoted to highways Georgia would by now be "out of the mud" not only on the main roads but in every county.

Turn to the Back.

Savannah Morning News of the day after the hurricane carried columns of storm news on the front page—under a Charleston date line.

But not a word about Savannah's storm on that page. Eight columns of it on the last page, with all available details.

Tradition! The News and its sister sheet, the Evening Press, date from away back. Back to the days when it was assumed everybody knew what was happening in town and only news from Washington and Europe was worth displaying. If the mayor, the entire city council and the total membership of the Chamber of Commerce were blown up by a bomb it wouldn't make the front page of the Morning News. Unless it happened in Claxton or Statesboro, not far away. In which it would appear as "telegraph."

I used to argue the subject with Herschel V. Jenkins, who publishes the two papers, and with various editors. I expressed the idea that local news was of prime importance. They agreed. But they said Savannah readers for generations had been accustomed to finding news on the back page and invariably read that first. To change would bewilder them. And Savannah folk don't like to be bewildered.

Willkie Visits His Five Farms; $274,653 for Speaks Today

G.O.P. Nominee Expected To Outline Views in Acceptance Address.

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 16.—(P)—Wendell L. Willkie inspected his five Indiana farms today and then put the final touches on the speech in which he will accept the Republican Presidential nomination tomorrow in his home town of Elwood.

The nominee made an early morning drive to his farms, which total 1,400 acres—wheat, corn, soybeans, alfalfa and other crops. He talked with farm hands and looked over his crops. Tomorrow at Elwood, 50 miles northwest, he is expected to speak for a half hour shortly after 4 p. m. (Atlanta time) and to outline broadly his views on all major issues.

His views on conscription have not yet been disclosed, but some of his remarks have indicated that he favors the draft principle if necessary to national defense.

As to foreign policy, the nominee has said he favored giving to Great Britain such aid as will not impair American defenses. He is expected to call, too, for a powerful national defense—to be built by co-ordination of manpower with the nation's industrial machinery.

The administration farm program, Willkie has said, should be retained until something better is found.

Willkie will make his acceptance speech in Elwood's Callaway Park, which was a cow pasture when he was a boy. Near the speaking stand runs Duck creek, where he used to swim. As a boy he drove cows through the pasture for 75 cents a week.

THOUSANDS POURING INTO TOWN OF 10,000

ELWOOD, Ind., Aug. 16.—(P)—This home town of Wendell Willkie, which registered a population of only 233 in the last 10 years, was a census taker's nightmare tonight as thousands poured into it to see the Republican nominee find out officially that he is his party's choice.

"Home town" is a misnomer. Actually this capital of the Indiana tomato belt, where Willkie drew his first breath 48 years ago, is a fourth-class city—one of Indiana's 16 such—and normally boasts 10,798 persons (1940 census).

Tonight its population was anybody's guess and even Homer Caphart, of 1938 "Cornfield Conference" fame, the Willkie notification general chairman, wouldn't hazard an estimate on the size of the crowd by tomorrow afternoon when Willkie accepts formally the nomination.

California To Vote On Pension Plan

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 16.—(P)—A revised "ham and eggs" pension plank calling for the payment of $20 a week to certain persons over 50 years of age, qualified today for a position on the November, 1942, election ballot.

It will be the third time the California electorate has been called upon to vote upon a pension plan sponsored by the Retirement Life Payment Association, a Los Angeles organization. A $30 Thursday plan was defeated in elections in 1938 and 1939.

The association submitted 212, 159 signatures, or 42 more than the minimum required to qualify an initiative measure for the ballot.

SAFETY CHECK-UP.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 16.—(P)—Traffic officers of Augusta are giving motor vehicles their fall inspection. The police check brakes, horn, lights, steering apparatus and visibility, requiring vehicles failing to pass the test to return after repairs for another inspection. The purpose is to reduce accidents.

next Monday. How about getting hitched Sunday? What'sa say?" And the answer is likely to be: "Five-dollar raise? That makes thirty bucks a week. And I'm making twenty here and what chance of a job in Knoxville? Let's just let it ride a couple of years. Oh, yes; I'll write to you."

Postcard from Memphis calls attention to businessman so patriotic he tore the fifth column off his adding machine. If you've heard that one before what are you going to do about it?

Noise problem is associated in the public mind with big city traffic, but Lakeland, Ga., has its troubles, according to the Lanier County News.

It appears the Lakeland telephone service is all shot because of noise. There are cars and trucks on Main street, a theater close by and a bowling alley in the same building with the exchange. The News claims for a removal to a quiet sector.

Americus Gets $274,653 for Airport Project

Location Is Southern Field; Pilot Training To Be Given.

AMERICUS, Ga., Aug. 16.—(P)—Chamber of Commerce officials revealed today that a $274,653 WPA project for the construction of an airport at Souther field has been approved.

They said a commercial firm has already signed an agreement to open a pilot training school at the field as part of the national defense program.

The Midland Aircraft Corporation will construct a plant here for the manufacture of planes, Hugh C. Robbins, of Chicago, president of the company, said.

Americus was selected from 109 cities under consideration.

Mrs. J.K. Ottley, Social Leader, Succumbs Here

Chicago. At the latter institution she specialized in the social sciences.

She and Mr. Ottley were married at Columbus March 21, 1888. Surviving are two children, John Jr., advertising director of The Constitution, and Mrs. George Weyman McCarty. There are five grandchildren, George Weyman and John Ottley McCarty, and John and Dudley and Mary Fenton Ottley.

Perhaps her chief public interest was Tallulah Falls school, owned and operated by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs for mountain boys and girls. She was one of its four original trustees at the founding in 1908 and had been president of the board of trustees since 1922.

Life Director. She was a life director, for service, of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; director, Students' Aid Foundation, a loan fund for young women; chairman for 26 years of the Georgia Library Commission; charter member and second president, Atlanta Woman's Club; charter member, Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy; member, Atlanta chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and a member of the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

A life-long Democrat in politics, Mrs. Ottley was Georgia's first woman national Democratic committee member, having been named during the incumbency of the late Clark Howell, national committeeman. She held the honorary degree of doctor of literature, conferred by the University of Georgia in June, 1926.

She possessed to a high degree the ability to write. One of the most charming contributions to American letters of a generation ago was her description of the building of the Ottley home and the interesting character sketches of the well-diggers, especially in stressful and dramatic moments. For two years she was a special editorial writer for the Atlanta Journal.

"Books for Bookless." Largely through her efforts as head of the library commission an appropriation was granted by the legislature in 1918 to further the work, which today extends throughout the rural parts of the state. With its slogan, "Books for the Bookless," the movement has provided thousands of volumes, and its scope is steadily increasing.

She was influential in obtaining passage of modern child labor legislation in Georgia.

Mrs. Ottley presided over the convention in Atlanta in 1896, at which the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs was formed, but declined the first presidency, preferring working chairmanships, one of which, during the years, she held virtually everyone having relation to social betterment.

Her last official act in connection with the Tallulah Falls school was to set in motion a plan whereby graduates there might attend higher institutions of learning of earned funds, thereby incurring debt. She was chairman of the school's expansion campaign of 1922-27.

The loan fund which she assisted in founding now possesses $50,000. It began with $60. Her interest in education led her for eight years to serve as chairman of the Woman's Board of Visitors of the Atlanta public schools. Also she was a director of the Southern Women's Educational Alliance.

Among her more social affiliations was membership in the History Class, Atlanta's oldest study club.

The residence, remarkable for its profusion of roses, often has been the scene of brilliant social functions and the gathering-place of persons devoted to the state's advancement.

British Munitions Orders 'Constantly Accelerated'

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(P)—A spokesman for the British purchasing commission said today that munitions orders placed in the United States were being "constantly accelerated" and that the "loss in shipments to England is infinitesimal."

To describe the speed of order acceleration, the spokesman said that whereas contracts of last October were placed at a rate averaging five a day, the average day now sees 25 to 40 placed. He said the machine tool industry "forming miracles" in meeting the demands of the British government.

Relief From Eye Strain L. N. HUFF OPTICAL CO. 54 Broad St., N. W., Healey Building

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

Sunday's lesson is the 23rd Psalm, and for the golden text the lesson committee has suggested the first verse: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want."

Sitting in a group of business and professional men some time ago in informal conversation, which centered about the present upset world, one of the leading merchants of Atlanta turned to me and said:

"None of us knows what will be the end of it all, but there is one thing I do know:

"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want."

And that, my friends, is just about the finest commentary on Sunday's lesson I have ever heard. David did not say He "will" be my shepherd, or "may" be my shepherd—he said He is my shepherd—

my shepherd now and always; therefore, I shall not want.

"The world could spare many a large book better than this shepherd Psalm. It has dried many tears and supplied the mold into which many hearts have poured their peaceful faith. . . . It is the pure utterance of personal trust in Jehovah, darkened by no fears or complaints, and so perfectly at rest that it has nothing more to ask. . . ." writes Dr. Alexander MacLaren.

As the eastern shepherd cares for his sheep, so God cares for His people. Our sufficiency is of God. He does not promise to give us what we think we should have, but He does promise to give us what is best for us. We shall not lack for any good thing—for any needful thing—

God will care for His people in the face of every threatened danger. He will care for His people in providing green pastures and quiet waters. He will care for His people in leading them into paths of righteousness. "Goodness and mercy shall follow me all of the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

God will care for His people when we get to the end of life's day. He will lead us through the Valley of the Shadow. We need have no fear of life, nor of death, nor yet of the great beyond. He knows the way, and He will lead us home.

This Psalm is so perfect an example of poetry that one fears to start into any sort of analysis of its statement, lest it mar the unity and beauty of the message. I dare say that it makes its own explanation to every truthful heart. One has but to be quiet and reflect upon these everlasting promises to be reassured that God is speaking—speaking to any and to all who will listen.

British Plan For Retreat Inside Berbera

Situation in Africa Admitted Critical; Italian Troops Bombed.

CAIRO, Aug. 16.—(P)—The British and Italian air forces traded bombs today from the Suez to Somaliland amid indications that British forces fighting on the southern shores of the Gulf of Aden might have to fall back, lacking reinforcements, on Berbera, their Somali capital and chief port.

The Italians bombed Alexandria anew overnight in an attempt to smash the British fleet concentration there, but failed to hit any warships.

Official British announcements detailed air raids on Italian objectives from Libya to the coastal and inland roads of Somaliland, where the Italian mechanized columns are fighting their way toward Berbera.

Although the raids in British Somaliland were stated to have been "successful," British spokesmen said that the military situation there was "rather critical" and that the British, now defending heights around Berbera, may be forced to retire to the town itself.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(P)—Selling in the bond market today was little more than a trickle, but buyers were wary and prices declined a trifle over the road from 105 1/2 to 102 3/4.

Professional traders accounted for a major part of the business. Their operations were small as evidenced by the turnover of $2,726,300 face value compared with Thursday's $2,991,150.

Some corporate loans rated as speculative and certain foreign issues under new anxieties generated by Germany's vast aerial attacks on the British Isles. Low-yield bonds were generally steady.

United States governments were traded lightly in a narrow range.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—(P)—In the worst break since the market cracked wide open last May, wheat prices today tumbled as much as 5 cents a bushel as the fury of the air attack on England increased.

September wheat fell to 66 1/4 at one stage, the lowest quotation posted here since last August 30, two days before the German invasion of Poland was launched. This compared with a peak of $1.11 reached before the collapse of more than 30 cents a bushel in May when the Germans pushed into western Europe.

For three weeks following that break in May the contract as well as other deliveries of wheat and other grains were held around minimum levels at the instigation of government officials. The minimum for September wheat was 78 1/4. The government loan rate for deliverable wheat here is 81 cents.

Corn fell more than a cent at one stage, while all oats and rye deliveries were at new seasonal lows, rye tumbling as much as 3 cents.

Vidalia Buyer Named by FTC Is Urged First In Trade Action

Violation of Practice Charged to Parr Sales Company.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Mitchell F. Brice, trading as Parr Sales Company, Vidalia, Ga., buying agent in the purchase of general merchandise, particularly foodstuffs, on behalf of the Tanner-Brice Company, Inc., is charged in a Federal Trade Commission complaint with violation of the brokerage paragraph of the Robinson-Patman act.

Brice as a member of the brokerage firm trading as the Parr Sales Company, and the acceptance of such brokerage fees and commissions by the respondent upon the purchases of the Tanner-Brice Company, Inc., is in violation of subsection (C) of section 2 of the Clayton act as amended by the Robinson-Patman act.

Savannah River Waters Receding

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 16.—(P) The turbulent waters of the Savannah river continued to recede here today after reaching the highest point in four years—40.9 feet. W. A. Wells, a government engineer, said a small swell might occur later but it would result in no large rise. Threats of a flood in the city were believed definitely over.

Three Hamburg men were rescued from the swollen river yesterday afternoon after their small boat capsized a mile south of Fifth Street bridge. The three, Lee Proctor, 18; M. H. Bailey, 39, and A. C. McLendon, clung to a tree in the middle of the river more than seven hours before they were rescued.

George Cites Lack of Cotton Buying Power

Points to Farm Families Unable To Purchase Products They Need.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—America's surplus cotton, which is increasing because of the European war situation, could be materially reduced if each family in the nation could afford to purchase an additional $100 worth of cotton products per year, Senator George, of Georgia, believes.

Speaking in reference to senate comments on unemployment and its consequent reduction in consumption of the nation's manufactured products, the Georgian said: "The real wealth of the nation is the employed in making goods and providing services. After all, that is the real wealth of any people, and when any considerable number of people are idle, tremendous actual wealth goes to waste, or, to put it the other way, potential wealth is being avoided by increasing the actual wealth of the country."

Expressing the opinion that his observation was applicable to the entire nation, Senator George asserted: "It may seem to those who do not live in the south and who are not familiar with the conditions there somewhat of an overstatement, yet I do not know of a single county in my state where the families could not on the average use, without being oversupplied but only reasonably supplied, an additional $100 worth of cotton goods and cotton products based on the retail price for such products. All my life I have known families, both white and colored, living on cotton farms, and I know that actual need, on a reasonable basis of comfort, would increase their purchases of cotton products by $100 a year if they had the purchasing power with which to secure those products."

The cotton remarks by the Georgian senator were made in a collateral discussion during senate debate on the conscription bill.

Buffington Beats Colson In State Meet

Hyden Drops Farmer; Atkinson Loses to Mrs. Comer.

GRiffin, Ga., Aug. 16.—Top-seeded John Hyden, of Nashville, and defending champion Don Buffington scored victories in the Georgia state tennis championships today as four players advanced to the semi-finals.

Buffington defeated Steve Colson, of Tampa, 6-1, 6-3, in the men's singles while Hyden was overcoming Bill Farmer, Presbyterian College ace, 6-2, 9-7. In the other two matches, Louis Schopfer, of New Orleans, took a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Richard Maas, of West Palm Beach, and Mike McLaney, of New Orleans, lost by default to Louis Faquin, of Memphis.

McLaney Defaults.

McLaney, who left to catch a train to the national in Cincinnati, held a 9-7, 5-3 advantage over his opponent when he was forced to default.

Faquin and Buffington were matched together in the semi-finals tomorrow while Hyden will oppose Schopfer.

Play in the junior singles saw Schopfer defeat Iver R. Wilson, of St. Petersburg, Fla., 6-0, 6-0, and Carl Maddox, of Atlanta, advanced over Teddy Prior, of West Palm Beach, by default. Colson conquered Stanley Gruner, of West Palm Beach, 6-4, 6-3, while Richard Shillinglaw, of Nashville, beat Jimmy Biggers, of Columbus, 7-5, 6-3.

Frank Willett, of Annonis, Ala., who turned back L. C. Longenecker, 6-1, 6-1, will meet Prior in the finals of the boys' singles tomorrow. The latter tripped Gruner, 8-6, 6-4.

In the women's singles, Frances Grossnickle, of Columbus, Miss., won from Miss Agnes Mize, of Griffin, 6-2, 6-1, and Mrs. Sara Comer, of Miami, defeated Mrs. Gladys Atkinson, of Atlanta, 6-2, 6-4, to advance to the finals.

SINGLES MONDAY.

All matches will be completed tomorrow with the exception of the men's singles. They will be played Monday. In the men's doubles, Faquin-McLaney oppose Dudley-Enloe; Hyden-Schopfer meet Colson-Farmer at 8 p. m.; and Buffington-Maas oppose Rice-Chambers.

Hapeville Nine Plays

Fickett-Brown Sunday

The Hapeville baseball nine meets Fickett-Brown at the Fruit Crows' diamond Sunday at 3:30 p. m. This game will decide the first half championship of the Atlanta league. A win for either team will assure them a place in the second annual state tournament.

National Biscuit, one of the favorites to cop the meet, will meet Arrow Shirts at Hapeville in a tune-up game for both clubs.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Landing a 795-pound man after a four and a half-hour struggle off Plum Island, Fredrick J. Gibbs, of Waban, surpassed yesterday the American Atlantic port-fishing record established July 23 by Ben Cromwinshield, of Annisquam and Boston, who pulled in a 753-pounder in Ipswich Bay.

Score Sheet

Larry Miller celebrated his thirteenth victory with a three-hitter and Emile Lochbaum won No. 14 at the expense of the Smokies.

Georgia made two changes in its football schedule, moving up the Oglethorpe and Kentucky games from Saturday afternoon to Friday night's. The Indians and Bob Felner kept rolling upward and the Tigers stayed on the chutes.

Jimmy Fox hit two homers to bring his total to 31 for the season and 495 for a lifetime. The Reds beat Chicago twice and came out of their hitting slump. The up-and-coming Pirates split the also up-and-coming Cardinals out and will meet today in the regional final at Spartanburg.

Ralph McClelland and Dewey Bowen pulled upsets in the city golf tournament. Don Buffington advanced in the state tennis meet. The Vols won again—twice.

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

Another Wonder Maybe you haven't seen the leaning tower of Pisa, the floating gardens of Mexico, the Taj Mahal by moonlight, or Earl Mann with a frown on his pan.

And maybe you would like to see something out of the ordinary.

We are not able to offer anything like the Petrified Forest, but can wholeheartedly recommend a visit to Ponce de Leon park Sunday afternoon.

On display at Ponce de Leon park will be a Nashville baseball team on the verge of winning its first Southern league pennant since 1916.

Larry Gilbert's Nashville Vols are too good for our nine. We'll have to be content with finishing a good second, it seems.

Our boys tried but they found the pace as set by the Vain Vols a bit too stiff.

Less than a month ago our boys were only five points in back of the leaders, but, alas, the Vols proved they were made of sterner stuff and pulled away again.

For the most part, they have made a mockery of our efforts to close the gap. Most likely they consider the current series here a mere formality.

Of course, stranger things have happened than a team blowing a six-game lead with some 33 games left to play. But it probably won't happen to those Vols. They're too good. They haven't been out of first place since the season started. They've got too much class, men.

Therefore, it is a real privilege to recommend the Vols of 1940. As Nashville's first pennant winner since far-off 1916, they deserve to go down in history as among such unusual things as the leaning tower of Pisa, the floating gardens of Mexico, the Petrified Forest, and Earl Mann with a frown on his pan.

And, except for such grim-visaged personages as Greek George, Baron Poffenberger and Tom Drake, they might seem as pretty as the Taj Mahal by moonlight.

Fugitive From Reds

I learned by way of Cincinnati last night why Joe Engel was in Atlanta. At first I thought he was a fugitive from the Lookout-Cracker series in Chattanooga, but a story out of Cincinnati gave a better jinking.

The Cincinnati story read:

"The biggest headache to Messrs. Giles and McKeechie is the $35,000 rookie, Mike Dejan. Bought from Chattanooga early last month on the strength of a lordly Southern league batting mark of .403, Lanky Mike has not only proven that he can't hit high-class major league pitching, but he also is a combination of Harlan Pool and Babe Herman on defense.

"In short, Lanky Mike isn't a major leaguer, and don't be surprised if he is shipped back to one of the Redleg farm clubs shortly."

This wasn't all the grief for Engel. He was shocked no little when asked about a story he had been fined $1,500.

"I haven't heard anything about it," responded the irrepressible Engel, "but you may take a shell-shock if you like—quote it is a mere bag o' shells unquote."

Engel seemed disappointed when he learned it was only a gag because he thought it would ruin the very good gag line above.

Maurice Bloch, president of Selma and one of Auburn's finest football supporters—not to mention his connection as Engel's partner—also was here.

"Thought you'd be vice president of the Boston Bees by now," it was suggested to Bloch, "inasmuch as stories have Engel going in as owner and president."

"I'll tell you," Bloch responded, "I expect to be honored all right, because that Engel has spent the summer putting the 'bee' on me."

A Little Dirt

It wouldn't be stretching the imagination very much to figure that the Crackers will install a sliding pit in their next spring camp and that a lot of the training activity will be centered around it.

They've got away from this phase of training somewhat in the last couple of seasons, but they'll be going back to it next spring.

The reasons are simple enough. Les Burge, in fact, is reason enough. Because of an awkward slide which resulted in a broken thumb, Les has lost a year of good baseball.

The injury never has healed and it has made Burge look like one of the world's worst. It hurt his batting even more than his fielding. He has been thumb-conscious all year.

Tom Hafey also hurt himself badly with an awkward slide, as did Willard Marshall. Used to be the old-timers like Cobb would spend hours every day learning how to slide. It was a self-protection measure, for one thing. They never got hurt.

Hafey got over his injury, along with Marshall, but Burge is just now getting around to the point where he can grip a bat again. He's hitting homers, too.

He had connected for only two all season and then hit for the circuit on successive nights at Chattanooga.

So, instead of being hurt by Hafey's loss, the Crackers might have been aided—due to Burge's return to form at the plate.

McNeill Plays Frank Kovacs For Net Crown

Joe Hunt, Tired Out by Grant Match, Loses at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Cal., seeded No. 3, gained the final round in the 24th annual Newport tennis tournament today by defeating Joseph Hunt, of Annapolis, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.

Don McNeill, national clay court champion from Oklahoma City, gained the opportunity to meet Kovacs in tomorrow's final by beating Frederick Schroeder, of Glendale, Cal., 6-3, 6-4 and 6-2.

Hunt's defeat was considered by some as retribution for his one-sided win yesterday over Bryan (Bitty) Grant, of Atlanta. Until the final set, the midshipman's chances looked good but Kovacs wore him down and forced him to lose his aggressiveness.

Bimelech Out For Three-Year Crown Today

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(UP)—Bimelech runs tomorrow in the 71st renewal of America's oldest horse race—the Travers stake—and he has a big job cut out for him before he can strengthen his claim to the divisional championship with another victory.

The Idle Hour colt will face eight rivals around the mile and a quarter road of the $25,000 event inaugurated way back in 1864, and he will carry a strange jockey and the heaviest impost he ever has been assigned when he shoulders his bright green and white silks into the gate.

The new jockey is Don Meade, the pinch-faced little fellow who joined the entourage of Colonel E. R. Bradley only two weeks ago to replace Fred A. Smith on the son of Black Tony's back. The weight is 128 pounds and it will take a lot of horse to carry such a load and bring it home in front.

None of the other eight nominees will approach that weight and most of them are fast opponents even when the impost is equal. The strongest of them is Mrs. G. W. Widener's Your Chance, a long-losing stretch runner, who comes in with a six-pound break at 122 and is certain to be second choice to Bimelech in the betting.

Heart of London Has Seen No German Raiders, Heard No Gunfire---Yet

NAZIS STRIKE HERE German sources said yesterday bombers started fires on either side of the Thames, shown where it runs under London bridge, at the right. The foreground shows the dock warehouses in the environs of London, reported damaged.

PEOPLE STILL STIR War or no war, Londoners go out each day trying to pick bargains as American housewives do. Here is a picture of famous Billingsgate market, crowded with people who come by foot and wagon. Those shown here are all buying fish.

ROYAL PAIR SEES DAMAGE Queen Elizabeth and King George leave a partially wrecked home during an inspection tour of Hull, oftentimes a target for Nazi bombers. They commended the residents of the house for their bravery and courage.

SERENE AS IF THERE WERE NO WAR

Yesterday these points in the heart of the city appeared quiet and peaceful, except for the drone of British fighters that hovered high above, ready to pounce on any Nazi plane that threatened. The Nazi planes stayed in the outskirts. Here are: (1) Old Bailey, central criminal court, (2) Port of London Authority Building, (3) St. Paul's cathedral, (4) Shooter's Hill, Kent; (5) Tower Bridge over Thames, (6) Cannon Street Station, (7) St. Bride's church, (8) Liverpool Assurance Company, (9) Public Records Office, (10) Law Courts, (11) St. Dunstan's-in-the-West church, (12) Lincoln's Inn fields.

ANOTHER NAZI 'SUCCESS'

Berlin reports "particularly successful" bombing raids had left the airport at Rochester, London suburb in the lower Thames valley shown here, "with little protection." Note the limed lines and wickets at lower left.

DOCKS OF LONDON

This aerial view showing the London docks is a sight familiar to Nazi fliers. The damage done by terrific bombing Thursday and yesterday is not clearly known. Nazi bombers have concentrated mainly on docks and airports.

New Pictures Offer Variety of Entertainment

Western Epic, Alaskan Story, Mystery Melodrama Open.

By LEE FUHRMAN.
Acting Motion Picture Editor.

A western epic, a story of the snow country and a mystery melodrama came into Atlanta motion picture theaters yesterday as two comedies moved serenely into coveted boxoffice position as holdovers.

Of the new films, "When the Daltons Rode," at the Fox, is full of action, excellent direction and way above par from both acting and casting standpoints. Another newcomer is "Money and the Woman," at the Capitol, a different sort of mystery story authored by James M. Cain, who started the literary world a few years back by writing the picturesque "Postman Always Rings Twice." To the Rialto came "The Girl from God's Country," featuring Chester Morris and Jane Wyman in a tale of a doctor and a nurse in the far reaches of Alaska.

The holdovers are "I Love You Again," starring Bill Powell and Myrna Loy, at Loew's, one of the best comedies to hit the town in many a moon, and "Pride and Prejudice," the pictureization of the Jane Austen classic which continues to charm audiences at the Rhodes.

Another newcomer is due tomorrow when "Private Affairs" comes into the Capitol. In the cast are Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings, Hugh (Woo Woo) Herbert and Roland Young. Tonight, the Fox midnight show, "The Girl from God's Country," featuring Chester Morris and Jane Wyman, is a tale of a doctor and a nurse in the far reaches of Alaska.

Incidentally, it's a world premiere for this film.

Rialto.

The best things about "Girl from God's Country," the picture at the Rialto this week, are the scenery and Chester Morris. This time 10 years ago square-jawed, slick-haired Morris was the reigning favorite on the lots of Hollywood, and now that he is back after a few years of lay-off, he is just as nice and tough as ever.

The scenery is that of the mountains and snows of Alaska. If the scenery plays fair with the moviegoers, there should be a tourist rush to the Land of the Midnight Sun.

As for the plot of "Girl from God's Country," it is a bit old, but Morris and what Alaska is supposed to look like make up for the moth-eaten story. A man who tries to bury himself away from it all. Morris is a doctor who had to leave civilization in a hurry to escape prosecution. He gets away with it for five years; then a United States marshal, played by Charles Bickford, catches up with him. The cold heart of the marshal, which reminds one of the snows and hills of Alaska, melts at the right moment, and the end of the show is not only touching, but makes one want to crawl up on the stage and try to shake hands with the shadow of Bickford as he closes the case without an arrest.

The "Three Stooges" are in another of their "comedies" as an added attraction. They slap each other around as usual, and if one likes that sort of thing, the Stooges should please.—S. S.

Fox.

Those who like films with plenty of fast riding, quick shooting and rapid-fire quips will find much to applaud in "When the Daltons Rode," starring Kay Francis and Randolph Scott, which began a week's engagement at the Fox yesterday.

Directed by George Marshall, who directed the sensational "Destiny Rides Again," the picture is a rousing western that gets off to a rather slow start. But when it does get started, there's movement all the way.

Meriting praise for fine work in supporting roles are Broderick Crawford, Frank Albertson, Stuart Erwin, Brian Donlevy, Andy Devine and Mary Gordon. Miss Gordon, who plays the role of the Dalton boys' mother, does an outstanding job.

The story deals with the career of the famous Dalton bandits, who began life as respectable farmers and then, through bitterness at unjust laws, became outlaws themselves. It's a good, swift show, a cartoon, news real and musical short complete the bill.—L. F.

Paramount.

"Money and the Woman" proves to be an interesting combination in Warner Brothers-First National's picture by that title, which opened yesterday at the Paramount theater.

Jeffrey Lynn plays the role of a young bank executive who becomes involved in a plot to loot the bank of $90,000. Perpetrator of the crime is the husband of lovely Brenda Marshall.

Adding romance to the mystery is the devotion that develops between Lynn and Miss Marshall as

70,000 Troops Begin Battle In Mock War

Guardsmen To Get Insight Into Modern Tactics in 4-Day 'Fighting'

CAMP BEAUREGARD, La., Aug. 16.—(P)—"Zero hour" arrived tonight for 70,000 troops opening a four-day battle in a vague boundary conflict between two "nations" in the Louisiana war games.

Surfanned National Guardsmen for the "Blue" nation clashed with their enemies, the "Reds," at midnight in the beginning of hostilities which had all the simulation of real warfare intended to give the guardsmen an actual insight into streamlined modern tactics.

Approximately 50,000 National Guard troops of the Third Army from 13 southern states, hardened in preliminary training since August 1, were participating with 20,000 regular army troops.

The total cost of the maneuvers, exclusive of two weeks' pay for the soldiers, is $1,826,200. The Blue Nation generally was defined as the area of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and that portion of Louisiana east of the Red river.

The Red Nation comprises the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Louisiana west of the Red river.

they set about uncovering the plot and bringing the guilty persons to justice.

The action is fast, but the outcome is obvious from the start, taking a great deal of the punch out of the climax. Robert Pressnell adapted a story of James M. Cain to the screen for the movie.

The supporting cast includes John Littel, Henry O'Neill, Roger Pryor, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams.

Also on the program is an "Information Please" and a musical novelty.—N. C.

Capitol.

"Private Affairs," new comedy billed as modern and breezy in spirit, opens a four-day engagement at the Capitol theater tomorrow. In the cast are Hugh Herbert, Roland Young, Nancy Kelly and Robert Cummings.

The picture deals with the romance of Nancy and Cummings, and is played against the background of staid Boston, where the couple battles family prejudices finally to win through to their heart's desire.

Herbert plays the role of a cab driver; Young takes the part of Nancy's father, while Montagu Love, veteran of silent films, enacts the role of Nancy's conventional grandfather. G. P. Huntley Jr. is cast as the choice of Nancy's father for her hand.

Added attractions include a sports subject, "Vacation Time"; a color cartoon, "Wild Hare," and a newsreel.

Italy's Apology Reported Given Greek Officials

Athens Government Calls Troops After Planes Bomb Warships.

ATHENS, Aug. 16.—(P)—The Italian naval attaché was reported in reliable circles tonight to have apologized to Premier John Metaxas for the aerial bombing directed at two Greek destroyers today, declaring the Italian fliers had mistaken them for British ships.

(At this point the Greek censor cut the connection in which this story was being telephoned to Budapest. The following matter was received earlier in the evening.)

The Greek government, however, ordered partial mobilization. A high authority declared definitely that the commanders of the destroyers, against which 17 bombs were directed without a hit, had identified the attacking planes as Italian. Witnesses told the same story.

In the mobilization call for August 20, one category which military quarters said included anti-aircraft gunners and observers.

Identification of the attacking planes as Italian was "absolute," the high informant said, and the officers of the warships—the Vasilevs Georgios I and the Vasilevs Olga—were so wiredless the Greek navy ministry.

Nevertheless, the government of this small pro-British kingdom—facing what some diplomatic observers interpreted as substantially an undeclared war—carefully refrained from comment, insisting that the bombers were of "unknown" nationality.

The destroyers were attacked en route to the Island of Tinos in the Aegean sea, where only yesterday the Greek cruiser Helle was mysteriously torpedoed by an "unidentified" submarine, said the Greek government.

ITALIANS ACCUSE BRITISH OF "PILOT"

ROME, Aug. 16.—(P)—Fascists declared angrily today that the torpedoing of the Greek cruiser Helle was "a second Athenia," perpetrated by the British navy to provoke a Greek-Italian explosion.

At the same time, they said Italy would demand Greek reparations for the beheading, allegedly by two Greeks, of Daut Hoggia, Albanian "patriot," near the Greek border recently. This incident has been the cause celebration of recent Greek-Italian tensions.

Persons who write with authority snapped back at suggestions that the Italians torpedoed the Helle off Tinos island yesterday and said it was evident to them that the whole thing was a "plot."

Nothing was said immediately about the bombing of Greek warships today by planes declared in Athens to have been Italian.

By calling the case a "second Athenia," Fascists referred to German contentions that the British sank their own liner Athenia the night of last September 3 in the expectation that the tragedy would be blamed on the Germans.

Italy had another British air raid today, but authorities said only slight damage was done in two villages near the industrial city of Turin.

The Italian high command announced another raid on the Malta air base, Halfar.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(P)—The New York maritime register said today that two Greek freighters, 3,531 tons, had been torpedoed in the Aegean sea.

One of the ships, while en route from South America to Africa, nine men drowned on the Thetis A, and one was killed on the Naftilos, the register said.

F.D.R. En Route To See 91,000 In Maneuvers

Declares He Probably Won't Hear Wilkie's Acceptance Speech.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(P)—When Wendell Wilkie steps before the microphone tomorrow afternoon to accept the Republican nomination for President, President Roosevelt will be watching maneuvers of the 91,000 soldiers now fighting a mock war in upstate New York.

The chief executive told his press conference today that he did not imagine he would be able to listen to the broadcast from Wilkie's native Elwood, Ind. He would be with the troops, he explained, from the moment he arrives tomorrow at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Mr. Roosevelt sped through a private schedule and left the capital for Ogdensburg tonight.

Among the President's callers today was Nelson A. Rockefeller, of New York, son of John D. Rockefeller Jr., whose appointment to be co-ordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the United States and the other American republics was announced subsequently at the White House. Stephen Early, the Rockefeller press secretary, said Rockefeller would be "another $1-a-year man," receiving only subsistence and expenses.

More Damage Threatened in Virginia Flood

Waynesboro Industrial District in Shenandoah Valley Inundated.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 16.—(P) Flood waters that have spread over much of southwestern and southside Virginia lowlands during the past three days swirled farther eastward and southward today with a threat of increasing damage.

The first serious damage in the Shenandoah valley was reported during the day at Waynesboro, where South river, swollen by tumbling mountain tributaries, inundated the industrial section and parts of the business area.

Upward of 40 primary highways, including all highways into North Carolina between South Boston in the south central sector and Suffolk, were closed by the rampaging rivers and creeks.

Ashurst Cites Georgia Supply Of Manganese

U. S. Need Not Depend on Brazil, Arizonan Declares.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(P) Digging back into 11-year-old Congressional Records, Senator Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona, pointed to long-recognized domestic sources of manganese, including 10 Georgia districts, as proof that the United States need not depend upon Brazil for its supply of the ore.

He told the senate the defense advisory commission, explaining a delay in obtaining manganese, had said it was necessary to build a railroad in Brazil to get to the deposits. This metal is vital in the manufacture of certain types of steel important in armaments.

Ashurst had reprinted in the Record a 1929 speech in which he said deposits of manganese had been found in 30 states. The list included the following mines or districts in Georgia:

Cartersville, Bartow county; Blue Ridge and Cherry Log, Fannin and Gilmer counties; Cave Spring, Floyd and Polk counties; Union Point and Robinson, Greene and Taliaferro counties; Mount Airy, Habersham county; Drakestown, Haralson and Paulding counties; Bowersville, Hart and Franklin counties; Lincolnton, Lincoln county; Doogan Mountain, Murray county; Cohutta and Tunnel Hill, Whitfield and Catoosa counties.

Other manganese deposits which he said included Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Delay in Prospect For New Air Base

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(P) The Navy Department advised Senator Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, today it intended to establish a naval aviation base at New Orleans "as soon as it can be done," but that delay was likely because of difficulty in selecting a site.

Swedish Batteries Fire On Foreign Warplanes

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(P)—Foreign planes flew over Swedish territory several times today with anti-aircraft batteries firing on them and Swedish fighter planes in pursuit. Reuters, British news agency, said tonight. The agency said one German bomber was seen over the district of Vinga on the west coast but disappeared when fighters arose. Another flew over Landskrona region in the south and two foreign planes flew over Stromstad on the west coast.

Movie Career Of Girl Ends Suddenly Here

Pretty Blonde Is Returned to Home in Greenwood, S. C.

The moving picture career of Margaret Pinson, pretty 16-year-old blonde, ended at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The career, which began suddenly in the morning in Greenwood, S. C., was rudely terminated as she stepped from a bus at the Atlanta depot when Mrs. J. B. Hewell, and Mrs. J. B. Baxter, Atlanta policemen, acting on instructions of the Greenwood police, took her in charge upon her arrival here.

Armed with a ticket to Hollywood and numerous movie magazines, the girl did an abrupt about-face, departing for her home in the custody of her father, W. T. Pinson, prominent Greenwood merchant, a short time after her arrival.

Pinson, who came to Atlanta within an hour after the bus arrived, stated his daughter disappeared from their home after he had remonstrated with her for reading so many movie magazines. "I wanted a movie career," she told the policemen. "I'm very fond of Clark Gable, Errol Flynn, Vivian Leigh, and Myrna Loy, so I spent most of my own savings for the bus ticket. Daddy says I can't have a movie career, so I'll have to go back home."

"I can't understand why daddy won't let me have the career, for I don't care anything about school or boys, and I just know I can be a movie star in a little while."

Department Store Trade Rises Here

Atlanta department store sales for the week ending last Saturday were 3 per cent above the previous week and 5 per cent greater than the same week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta reported yesterday.

Sales in the Sixth Federal Reserve district for the same period declined 1 per cent below the preceding week and gained 8 per cent over the corresponding week last year.

Comparing the four weeks ending the same date with the corresponding four weeks of 1939, both Atlanta and district sales gained 4 per cent.

British Cruiser Sunk By Bomb, Nazis Say

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(P)—NBC quoted the German radio today as claiming that a German "fighter plane" had sunk a British cruiser off Portsmouth with a bomb.

Mackay Radio reported the British steamer Clan McPherson radiated she had been torpedoed at 12:37 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The ship gave its position at about 400 miles west of Ireland. Screened, Oil-Treated, in N. & S. Stoker Coal $4.90 Ton. VE. 8815 W. D. Hardaway Coal Co.

British Tanker Sunk; Three Die, 35 Missing

VILLA FRANCA DO CAMPO, THE AZORES, Aug. 16.—(P)—The 8,406-ton British tanker, British Fame, was torpedoed and sunk Monday 200 miles south of Sao Miguel Island, the Azores. Fifteen surviving sailors reached here yesterday.

Three sailors died in the explosion and 35 others in two lifeboats still are missing. The submarine took the captain prisoner.

Ruling on $26 Million to State May Be Worth

Decision on Income Tax Deductions Heads for High Court.

The State Law Department yesterday won a case involving $26.09 million revenue officials estimate may bring approximately $1,200,000 into the state's coffers if it is upheld by the supreme court. Attorney General Ellis Arnall announced.

Arnall said the case involved the question of whether income taxes paid to the federal government in 1937 could be deducted from state income taxes.

An amendment, which provided for the federal tax exemption, became effective January 1, 1938. The law department issued a fi. fa. against Lane Fulenwider, of Savannah, in an effort to collect the 1937 taxes, contending they did not come under the exemption amendment, since it was not in effect at that time.

Fulenwider filed an affidavit of illegality to the fi. fa., and the law department in turned filed a demurrer to the affidavit. Judge John O. Rourke, of Chatham superior court, upheld the state.

Your Knees Tell as Much About You as Your Palm

Study a Girl's Walk To Know Her Character, Says a Dance Director

By Ida Jean Kain.

Some men take great stock in analyzing the set of a girl's mouth, the shape of her hands, or even her handwriting as an index to her disposition. But LeRoy Prinz, Paramount dance director, says to take her swimming and get a look at her knees!

The knees, so declares Mr. Prinz, tell whether she is sweet or snappish; smart or lazy. And he has worked out a system that is as exact as fortune telling! Here it is—how do your knees and disposition check?

Long knees denote affection and constancy.

Firm knees—obstinacy.

Round knees—artistic temperament and talent.

Fleshy knees—laziness and carelessness.

Knees that point outward—clumsiness.

Plump knees—an amenable disposition.

"Hard" knees—that is, knees that appear sharp when the muscles are tensed—quarrelsomeness.

Besides the knees, a girl's walk tells quite a lot, the dance director observes. A firm stride, with legs swinging from the hips, indicates self-confidence; short steps or mincing, hesitating steps indicate self-consciousness. And we might add that if the lady toes to a marked degree it is fairly certain she has a bad disposition—because she is breaking down her arches! Also, more than likely, she is knock-kneed!

In our experience, a girl either has pretty, dimpled knees or she hasn't—and prayer is no help. But a walk is something that can be fixed. It will pay you to learn to walk beautifully. Pointing the toes straight ahead not only gives you stronger arches but relates the knees outward, as they should be. Swinging the legs from the hips cuts down on knee action and jerkiness. Use the hips as a unit when you walk—not as two sections. And walk with the feet in as straight a line as possible to keep the hips from swaying.

In transferring the weight from one foot to the other, begin the transfer with the forward movement from the hip. Don't shift the weight suddenly or you will come down with a pounding step. There are two schools of thought as to whether you should come down first on the heel or first on the ball of the foot. To my mind, the most graceful step is the one in which the heel just slightly precedes the ball of the foot. The step should be: Firm, glide; firm, glide.

Practice walking beautifully—you will be delighted with what it can do for your poise and your figure.

Posture rules in the leaflet, "Posture Makes the Figure," will help you to acquire a graceful walk. Send stamped return envelope for this material to Ida Jean Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

A. Moisten the scalp and hair with vinegar and comb with a very fine comb, dividing the hair in small sections so that each section may be thoroughly combed.

Q. What is the average number in white and Negro families?
A. The 1930 census disclosed that the average for whites was 3.8 and the average for Negroes was 4.2.

Q. Is it possible to can fruit juice for later jelly making?
A. Yes; jelly from juice stored six months may have as good texture as that made from the fresh juice, though the color and flavor may not be quite so good, especially in the case of red fruits. When such canning is desirable, fill hot sterilized glass jars with the juice, without reheating it. Partially seal. Place on a rack in a water bath at 185 degrees F., simmering temperature. The water should reach an inch or two above the jars. Bring the water again to simmering temperature and keep it there for 20 minutes if the jars are of pint or quart size. Complete the seal at once and store the jars in a cool, dry place protected from light.

Q. How should home-canned frods be stored?
A. Store in a cool, dry place,

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Mother (to visiting niece): "While you are here, I hope you will take the opportunity to show Jean that shorts are all right for some occasions but not to wear all the time."

Resourceful parents will not hesitate to enlist the aid of the object-of-worship during the hero-worshiping stage of their children's development.

Here's a Plan To Help Train Your Dog

Frisky wire-haired terrier or stalwart Great Dane—any dog can be trained to be a well-behaved member of the family.

And how proud your pet is—and how proud you are of him—when he can do clever tricks.

Here are the rules that will make your dog's training go smoothly and easily. Repeat your commands in the same words and in the same tone. As different voices will confuse a dog in the learning stage, it's best for you alone to do the training. Don't make any lesson too long, and, before starting on a new command or trick, review the old ones.

One command that every dog should learn to obey is "Sit Down." Take your dog's leash in your left hand and with your right press lightly on his haunches to get him into a natural sitting position. Repeat the words "Sit Down" until he's still, then withdraw your hand.

If he starts to rise, stop him—saying "No, no! Sit down." When he's learned to sit still at command without your touching him, give him a tasty food for reward.

By just as easy steps you can teach your dog amusing tricks like "Chase Your Tail," "Shake Hands," "Sit Up." And a husky, alert dog enjoys it all.

Keeping your dog healthy is largely a matter of diet. Know what proportions to give—of vegetables, starch, meat.

In our 40-page booklet, HOW TO RAISE AND TRAIN YOUR DOG, an authority on dog care explains proper diet and grooming in detail, tells how to recognize and treat ailments. Gives rules for training, teaching 20 tricks. Lists breeds.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, HOW TO RAISE AND TRAIN YOUR DOG, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

The adoption of extreme styles in cosmetics and dress suitable to someone else's type may camouflage your own natural charm, which can be better emphasized by adhering to the good taste theory.

Latest Tips On Deanna's Wardrobe

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16.—What Deanna Durbin wears today you will see on the back of young America tomorrow. So let's look at Deanna's current private and screen wardrobe.

Very attractive is Miss Durbin's No. 1 "date" dress of black velvet. The skirt is flared to back fullness and topped by a perky bow at the scalloped point of the close-fitted jacket. (You have to look hard to see where the jacket ends.) Eyelet embroidered pink bengaline decorates the collar and short sleeves. Deanna's hat, of black felt, is wide brimmed and worn off the face. Shoes, bag and gloves are black suede and kid.

Very tailored is Deanna's late summer and early fall coat. Of green basket-weave covert cloth, the coat has a double-breasted front and is fastened with matching green buttons and green leather belt. The wide collar, notched to effect revers, is of ocelot. Deanna carries a matching muff. A black postillion felt hat and black suede accessories finish the ensemble.

A tailored suit in autumn gold will be worn by the young actress at the first peep of cold weather. The suit is of herringbone, Shetland tweed with a bunch of kick pleats and slight flare styling the skirt, which is topped by a lip-length, double-breasted jacket accented with brown buttons. Attention to detail is seen in the stitched panel of the front and the tiny pointed shoulder pockets. Brown is repeated in Deanna's sports felt hat and suede accessories.

And here are some numbers to be worn by Deanna in her newest picture, "Spring Parade." . . . An authentic Hungarian style, with snug-fitting bodice of green velvet over muslin blouse with puff sleeves. The wide, flaring, green wool skirt is accordion-pleated and bordered with peasant embroidery. Twelve starched petticoats balloon out the skirt. . . . And for high society occasions there is a horizon blue faille taffeta with matching blue organza shower ruffles, hand-embroidered with flowers and bound in rose satin ribbon. The hat to go with it is a sailor of champagne straw braid, decorated with large roses and fly-away veiling of matching blue. Accessories: blue suede gloves with fine petit-point flowers, a small silk purse decorated with seed pearls, and a fluffy parasol of the same fabric as her dress. . . . For dancing at the Emperor's palace, Deanna wears a faille taffeta, in an apricot shade, patterned with a Roses of Picardy print. A tangerine yoke, ruffles of lace, and blue velvet ribbons and bows give the gown an ultra-feminine look.

after the Chinese rice-picker's outfit. The loose-fitting jacket and slacks are of blue cotton, and her sunshade is like a Chinese coolie's hat. Irene's sandals are of natural straw and flat-heel. Over her shoulder, a bamboo bag, inside of which is her bathing suit.

Anna Sten lunches at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby in print afternoon dress, featuring large black butterflies on a pink background with two butterfly appliques below the shoulders. Her fur is platinum foxes; her hat is a black felt with a crown of flesh-colored plumage and black veiling; shoes, wedge-heeled pumps; bags and gloves of simple lines in black suede.

Bette Davis wears an "identity" onlooker dress at the tennis tournament of the West Wide Club. On the flaps of each of the two pockets on her cocoa-colored sports frock are embroidered Bette's name in hyacinth blue. Her first name shows up on the single bodice pocket; her surname on the hip pocket on the opposite side.

We are just about due for some rain, and Binnie Barnes is prepared with a green oilcloth rain suit, which has a flared skirt and a tightly buttoned jacket. The jacket has a hood lined in red.

Furs are at the fore already in the fast-moving fashion parade even though milady, in all this heat, can scarcely be expected to think seriously of such matters now.

If you're interested, though, coats will be longer, box jackets boxier and shorter this season. And for furred and fur-trimmed suit jackets, the length has been ruled as 32 inches.

Sheared heavier is destined to be immensely popular, while muskrat and caracul hold their own—practical, sturdy and wearable on almost any occasion. Goat and pony are also popular, as well as a number of real and imitation fur trims of the more exotic type, such as tiger, leopard and zebra.

MY DAY: Everyone's Opinion Needed on the Draft

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Thursday.—It was a beautiful drive to New York yesterday, both going down and coming back, but on the way home I slept most of the way. I was the lone passenger and after reading two newspapers tried to read a book, but I don't find that very satisfactory in a car. Before long I was waking up with a start every now and then, realizing that I had been sound asleep. On one occasion, as a car passed us, I awoke just in time to see a very amused lady turning around to look at me.

In the morning I went to a meeting of the U. S. Committee for the Care of Refugee Children, and then went to the hotel to lunch with a number of my friends who have come up from Washington to work at the national Democratic committee headquarters. Mrs. Dorothy McAlister, who is head of the women's division, is just getting settled, with Mrs. May Thompson Evans to help her. I went the rounds afterwards to say a word of greeting to all my friends, including Mr. Edward J. Flynn, Mr. Frank Walker and Mrs. Charles Michelson.

Later I saw a number of people and did not get off for the country until 5 o'clock, so it was after 7 when we sat down on my porch for a quiet dinner. The mail was waiting to be done in the evening, and I still see Miss Thompson's desk piled high, though she had hoped that a day or two here alone would enable her to catch up on her work.

I am going off again today to Orange county to attend the Union Festival which, I am told, is a colorful occasion. Tomorrow I will tell you more about it.

Miss Thompson's conscience keeps her right at her desk, so if any of you have written me letters and received no answers, it is because of the amount of mail which has been pouring in of late.

It is very interesting to me to see the differences of opinion on the conscription bill. The Burke-Wadsworth bill has really been studied by a great many people, and they write objecting to certain particular clauses. Some people are opposed to any kind of service or training, military or otherwise. Others object to such things as not safeguarding conscientious objectors, or the range of age, or the compulsory provision. By and large, I should say from the mail that there is a realization that some kind of universal service would be a good thing, with a minimum amount of military service needed during a part of the time. I am glad that a full and free discussion is going on, so that when legislation is passed it will represent the will of the majority of the people.

He's an Ideal Friend--- But the Woman Must Pay

By Caroline Chatfield.

We have the most satisfactory friend imaginable. From his delphinium blue eyes to his strong rhythmic stride he suits us. As is the way with true friends the satisfaction is mutual. He believes we could pull down the moon and hand it to him and this sublime faith in us almost convinces us that we could, if we tried. He calls and we answer. We call and he answers. He asks and we give; anything, everything from the cream in our coffee to the tenderloin side of our T-bone steak; from the pink livers of the broilers to the fattest of the fresh shrimp. Concerning the contents of the refrigerator we have a tacit agreement.

Our friend has no inhibitions, which we are sure accounts for the fact that we have no misunderstandings. He's affectionate, demonstrative, sweet-natured and soft-spoken. He never complains except when we put on our hat and make for the door. Amazingly clever he is at divining our thoughts. (Anyone dubious about thought transference should study the case of our friend and us.) Though we are often downcast by his vocal complaints at our leavetaking, we are correspondingly uplifted by his evident joy at our return.

Strangely, nobody seems to appreciate him properly but ourselves. Nobody thinks him as handsome or as smart as we do. People criticize his figure, his gait, the quality of his voice and his autocratic manner. They call him greedy, selfish, spoiled, pampered, and objectionable in his possessiveness. But we don't mind because this friend adores us, is utterly dependent upon us and is desolately aware, separated from us, of the flatness of his devotion. We would pay any price and call it cheap.

Frankly there is a price to pay as there is a price to pay for everything worth having in this life and nothing comes higher than a fastidious friend who will go hungry rather than eat what doesn't tempt his appetite. There's a price to pay, too, for his utter disregard of a needle-point chair, an Oriental rug and the wallpaper between the floor and window sill. After all, a little picking at the needlepoint, a little ruffling of the pile of the rug and a little soiling of the wallpaper are not irreparable damages. If committed by one's best friend they appear quite inconsequential.

Perhaps we should confide that our friend is a Siamese cat and admit, too, that we feel really sorry for any woman who lives alone without the comforting companionship and the great nuisance value of gentleman of his school.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Late fall suits will go long-jacketed. A number of them will be long-waisted as well, but the majority will have a two-purpose coat-jacket. Rich trims in caracul and beaver will alternate with all-gait, the quality of his voice and his autocratic manner. They call

Sports Style Buttons at Back

By Lillian Mae.

There's a fresh, clean-cut, American-girl spirit about Pattern 4463! It's a Lillian Mae dress, which explains its unusual veer and originality. That button-up-the-back idea is ingeniously young combined with the bow of the sash which comes from the front panel or winds all around. There are shoulder-to-shoulder yokes at both front and back, made on a striking crossgrain. You might have the yokes and sleeves in sprightly contrast. Notice the smart front panel and the new touch of buttons that march down either side to below the waist. Omit the sleeves and you'll have a real sportster!

Pattern 4463 is available in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3 7/8 yards 35-inch fabric.

The little guests were invited to the play yard, where multi-colored streamers and balloons welcomed them. Here they enjoyed the swings, sea-saw, and sand box.

The central decoration of the table was a white cake with tiny pink rosebuds and green leaves. Two small pink candles on the table were asked to make a wish before blowing out their candle. Green and pink favors were arranged at each place.

Invited were Nancy Carmack, Mary Humphrey, Martha DeBeauvoir, Turner Lewis, Harriet Anne Jacobs, June Harper, John Sessoms, Jane Sewell, Marshall Sims, Nancy Overstreet, Bobby McBrayer, Walton Peabody, Henry Peabody, Thad Blackstock and their mothers.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

Al Martino Meets Marilyn, Then Leaves for New York

By JANE DIXON.

SYNOPSIS.
Clara Marsh, vain and very conscious of her blond good looks and good figure, is voted the winner of a beauty contest, promoted by the Metropole Amusement Corporation of New York, which attracted entries from six rural counties. She is so overcome that she can scarcely speak when she is introduced from the stage of Millville's Bijou Theater by Al Martino, Metropole's sleek-haired representative, but soon she is preening before the cracked mirror in the star's dressing room of the little show house. The prize is a ten-day trip to New York, all expenses paid, night-dressing included. Clara is still posing before the mirror when her timid mother calls to congratulate her, but Clara sends her away with a suitcase, heavy with her properties, in the hope that Marilyn will ask her out for a date. He merely instructs her to report the next day to the arrangements office. That evening her younger sister, Marilyn, receives a telegram while the family is on the veranda of the run-down Marsh house. It announces that she has won the prize of $1,000 for the best line in the Clarno Soap Sales Contest. Marilyn's success and happiness are shared by her mother and sister. Sister of trying to detract from her beauty contest honors. The next day Marilyn and Sally Meacham, who works with her in the Bon Ton Store, go in celebration for lunch to the Silver Grill. Marilyn, there with Clara, is attracted by the two pretty girls and illustrates Clara by asking who they are. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT IV.
"Well, he must be a jellyfish or he wouldn't fail for that la-de-dah stuff," Clara puts out. She makes me sick, moonin' round and making faces at herself in the looking glass. Hey, look, somebody's coming up the walk. It's a man. You expecting a boy friend?"

"No, Bill. Probably a friend of Dad's."
The man came into the lane of light that shone out through the front door—the man who had been in the Silver Grill with Clara! Marilyn drew back into the shadows.

"Hello, young fellow," the visitor greeted Bill, who was standing agape on the top step. "Are you Bill Marsh?"
"Sure," Bill was being important, none too friendly.

"Good guess. Then you'd be the brother of Miss Clara Marsh. Does she happen to be at home this evening?"
"No, she's out. Went out right after supper."

"You wouldn't know, by chance, where I might find her?"
"You're right, I don't know. Clara wouldn't tell me the time o' day."

"No? That's not very sporting of her. The time of the day can be pretty important to a fellow. Sorry I missed your sister. We had an appointment. Must have been a mix-up. I understood I was to call for her here."

Bill melted under the ingratiating manner of the visitor.
"Maybe you'd better come up on the porch and wait, he offered. "My other sister Marilyn is here. Maybe you could talk with her till Clara turns up. Hey, Marilyn—Sis—here's a man to see Clara."

Marilyn groaned inwardly.
"Oh—yes—yes, Bill. I must have been asleep. Someone for Clara?"

"That's it." To the visitor. "What did you say your name is, please?"
"Martino. Al Martino. At your service."

Marilyn emerged from the shadows. The light from the hall touched her hair to a shining halo.

Bill announced solemnly, "Sis, this is Mister Martino. And this is my sister, Marilyn."
"Am I intruding?" Al Martino hesitated on the steps.

"Oh no, indeed." (Marilyn thought: Bill needs strangling.) "I'll try to locate Clara. I'll try the phone."

"Please don't." The words hinted of a plea. "She's sure to be back presently. Meantime, if you don't mind a bit of a chat—you know I've been hoping I'd meet you. In fact, I made up my mind day before yesterday, when I saw you lunching in the Silver Grill, that I would not leave Millville until I did meet you."

The surprise visit on the veranda was the start of Al Martino's pursuit of Marilyn Marsh. There was nothing subtle about his methods. Frankly he was infatuated. He made no attempt to conceal his infatuation. He bombarded her with invitations, with thoughtful and well-chosen gifts of candy, flowers, books—the conventional presents of a proper young man. He prolonged his stay in Millville long past the necessity of business.

"Please," she begged him, when he atmosphere in the Marsh home became almost unendurable. "I'm not interested in you, Al. I like you well enough, but there are—circumstances I can't explain. Be a lamb, will you, and let's just nod as we pass by?"

"I don't like lambs," Al was stubborn. "They bleat."
"But if I tell you you're making a lot of trouble for me, for all of you? I must ask you, not to try to see me again and not to send me another gift. I'd have to return it, and I hate hurting people."

"You ask me to whistle myself off, but it would be any good because the answer is that I'm not using the heartbeat of my life."

pass on with a nod. I'm not such a bad fellow when you get to know me, H. B., for short. There are times when I actually make sense. I have a nice disposition. I'm kind to my mother and to little children. I never kicked a dog, a bright future is predicted for me by my employer, and I think you're a sweet stick of stripped candy with a ribbon bow on it. Now will you take off your cellophane and let me drive you to the River Inn this evening for a plate of chowder?"

Marilyn shook her head. It was hard to be severe with such a persistent, such a jovial young man. "No," she said. "Thank you. I shall be busy this evening—every evening."

"The River Inn, noted for its cuisine and the exclusiveness of its patrons. All the young bloods crept about drive their wheels in the River Inn for a plate of chowder. Do you feel yourself weakening?"

"No. I'm stronger. Al, you must believe me. You don't understand—"

"Come, come, H. B. 'Tain't polite to tell folks they're stupid. I understand you're on a spot, but there's no reason why you should anchor on it. I've promised myself I'd keep clear of what is none of my business—but when things get too thick what concerns you is my business. No River Inn."

"Then I'll have to think up some more intriguing place to invite you tomorrow."

The dark young man who had played so significant a part in the lives of the Marshes, appearing out of the nowhere and thrusting himself into the limelight, gave promise of becoming difficult. Marilyn's rebuffs merely fired the ardor of his pursuit.

Bill Marsh was hard at work on his third piece of French toast, a specialty of the Marsh breakfast table, when he suspended action in mid-air.

"Hey," he said, "lookit who's here! Gee whillikens, the world must be coming to an end!"
The three Marshes at table followed Bill's astonished eyes. Clara was gliding across the room—gliding is the word—her eyes opened wide, her lips puckered into the pouting smile she cultivated. Clara down for breakfast?

The occasion was one for the family wonderment. Clara hastened to explain.

"I have the most marvelous news," she said, sipping the orange juice her mother handed her, with studied daintiness. "I'm leaving for New York in three days—that's from today. Al got a wire last night. He had to leave right away—I think he caught the midnight train. He's going to meet me at the station in New York. There's to be flowers and a well-coming committee and all the papers will take my pictures."

"Whadda they want to do that for?" Bill asked, through a mouthful of toast.

"To print, naturally." Clara dropped three lumps of sugar into her coffee. "There'll be pages and pages of them. Eat your toast, little boy, you'll be late for school."

"Gee, there must be a lot o' dopes in New York," Bill forked his fourth piece of toast.

Marilyn's eyes sought her father's. He pushed back his chair, rose from the table. The dry cough, a sort of clearing of a constricted throat, was more eloquent than words. Marilyn knew. He had failed with Mums. Mums was not going to New York with Clara.

"They're arranging for a delegation to see me off on the train here in Millville," Clara went on. "They're getting the file and drum corps from the Legion. I'm to ride in a special car, decorated with flags and flowers. The mayor is going to make a speech. I'll wear my new powder blue suit, the one with the cunning jacket and the cream lace blouse. I can't decide which hat—the crushed raspberry is the most becoming. If I could find crushed raspberry gloves and purse—Mother! look at that boy! He's eaten a whole glass of your good apple jelly!"

"Jelly's good for growing boys," Mrs. Marsh sat down to her coffee. It had grown cold while she waited on the others.

"Here, mums, let me warm it up," Marilyn said, pouring the cold coffee into her own cup and refilling her mother's from the steaming porcelain pot.

"Thanks, baby. As you were saying, Clara, the new powder blue suit would be lovely on you—finish your milk, William, and get on to school, that's a good boy."

Bill took a handful of sugar lumps from the bowl and thrust them into his pocket. "Gee-whillikens," he grumbled, "can't a guy in this house ever grow up?"

A messenger waited to hand Marilyn a note when she arrived at the Bon Ton. The watchman was opening the store doors. Employees were straggling through the side entrance. They looked at her curiously. Messengers were major events in Millville. She waited until she had reached the cloakroom to read the message. "H. B.—You get your wish. I'm on my way. But don't burn the Roman candles. I'll be back in a flash with a dash. Maybe when this beauty parade is over you'll have softening of the heart and treat me more like a pal than a burglar. Until then—Al."

Sally Meacham breezed in, threw her hat at a hook.

"Good morning, slaves," she called, addressing the room at large. "Look at Lynn. Look's like she's swallowed the cat—I mean the canary. What're you reading, honey lamb, a mash note?"

"Al Martino has been called back to New York. He left last night. The note says farewell."

"He'd certainly feel flattered if he could see the pleasure his farewell gives you. What about Queen Clara? Don't tell me she's given up the idea of knocking the metropolis into a coma?"

The Unexpected Reprieve

YE GODS! ANOTHER NUT HERE TO CONFESS! BARRICADE THE DOORS, MIKE!
FIVE MINUTES LATER—

It Takes All Kinds

OH, BUT SAM—I CAN'T ACCEPT IT—THAT IS FAR TOO MUCH! IT'S NOT WORTH HALF OF THAT—
TOO MUCH? FOR A FINE BRIGHT, AIRY ROOM IN A REAL HOME WITH FRIENDS?
FOR MEALS WHICH YOU COOK YOURSELF? WHY, IT IS FAR LESS THAN I HAVE PAID FOR A COT IN A DARK GARRET ROOM AND POOR FARE AT A CHEAP RESTAURANT—
BUT—BUT—I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO SAY—
GOOD—THEN SAY NOTHING—YOUR DEEDS ALONE ARE ELOQUENT—ONE CAN NOT BUY SUCH GENEROUS HOSPITALITY AS YOURS—HAI! OR SUCH COOKING!
HA! HA! SAM, YOU'RE A FLATTERER. I DO BELIEVE—
OH, BERT—HE'S SO FINE AND GOOD—HE SEEMS ALMOST LIKE A—LIKE A—SON—
HM—M—LIKE A SON? WELL, YES, I GUESS HE DOES—LIKE A GOOD SON—

Blanket Service

WHAT IF MAMIE DID HIDE YER CLOTHES? I COULD BUNDLE YOU UP IN A BLANKET AND TAKE YOU TO A CLOTHING STORE AND YOU CAN GET A NEW OUTFIT.
WELL, I SHOULDNT, BUT I SHALL.
ATTA BOY, NOW THERE AIN'T ANY REASON WHY WE CAN'T SHOVE OFF ON OUR TRIP WEST.
WELL, I CAN THINK OF ABOUT A DOZEN REASONS, FIRST—MAMIE WILL BE MAD, SECOND—SHE FOUND ALL MY MONEY AND I'M BROKE AGAIN—THIRD—AW, NEVER MIND TH' OTHER TEN!

The Lady Requests

BUT I WAS HELPLESS, CHIEF. I COULDN'T THINK! I COULDN'T ACT! AND I COULDN'T REMEMBER!
WHATEVER IT IS THAT YOGEE USES ON HIS VICTIMS, IT MUST BE POWERFUL!
BOYS, YOU WERE RIGHT THERE. TELL THE CHIEF HOW THIS ALL HAPPENED.
MEANWHILE, YOGEE'S WIFE IS BEING PLACED BEHIND BARS BACK IN THE CELL BLOCK.
THANK GOODNESS I'VE BEEN PUT HERE. THESE ARE THE FIRST PEACEFUL MOMENTS I'VE HAD IN THREE YEARS.
WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
I—I WANT TO SPEAK TO MR. TRACY!

Getting the Numbers

LET ME HAVE THE NUMBERS OF THESE BILLS, PLEASE!
CERTAINLY!

SMITTY

GEE, A LETTER FROM MA—SHE SAYS THEY'RE ALL HAVING A GOOD TIME ON THEIR VACATION, AND—
BE READY TO LEAVE AT FIVE—WE'LL DRIVE TO MY APARTMENT TOGETHER.
YES!

and while you are home alone don't forget to make the beds, hang up your clothes, brush your teeth, keep your hands clean and be a good boy. Love, Mother

AUGUST 17TH, SATURDAY, 1940.

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The morning hours and until 11:04 a. m. suggests that you hold a check on your nerves. This may be caused through attempting too much and thereby bringing on a feeling of fatigue. An excellent period to postpone important decisions. After 11:04 a. m. enthusiasm in financial matters should be restrained.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The period previous to 1:32 p. m. favors dealings with members of the opposite sex. The period favors dealings with older people. After 1:32 p. m. suggests sticking to routine matters. Not an especially auspicious period for new beginnings.

May 21st and July 20th (GEMINI)—The period previous to 11:04 a. m. suggests holding your nerves in check. During this period it may be easy for you to see things as they are. Not a good period for important decisions. The best vibrations of the day operate after 11:04 a. m.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—The entire day and evening favors social affairs, dealings with women. However, finances should be watched. An excellent period to stick to routine matters.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—During the entire day and until 4:17 p. m. favors new beginnings, new ideas, contacts with the opposite sex. After 4:17 p. m. suggests sticking to old thoughts and ideas and does not especially favor new beginnings.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—The entire day favors giving attention to details, small matters and attending to matters of minor importance that have been hanging fire for some time. Not an especially auspicious day for new beginnings.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—Irregularity and carelessness marks the morning hours until 12:32 noon, therefore new contracts and meetings are not likely to progress smoothly. After 12:32 noon favors social affairs, travel and work that requires a quick mental perception.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—The period previous to 1:53 p. m. does not especially favor the beginning of new or important undertakings. An excellent period to stick to routine matters. After 1:53 p. m. favors business and professional interests.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—The combined influences operating throughout the entire day and evening and to some extent during the day, are of a dissatisfactory nature. There is a feeling of strain or endeavor to get through. Not an especially auspicious day for new and important undertakings, especially those involving finances. A good day to stick to routine.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—Vibrations permeate the entire day that tend to agitate the mind and perhaps disturb the health. There may be a feeling of strain or endeavor to get through. Not an especially auspicious day for new and important undertakings, especially those involving finances. A good day to stick to routine.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The entire day and evening favors constructing, planning and for putting into effect new plans. You are likely to find people willing to listen to your ideas and older people more favorably inclined towards you. Business ventures where tact and diplomacy are required should prove successful.

Nazi Croydon Raiders 'Can Tell No Tales'

Not One of 30 Planes Returned, British Air Ministry Reports.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The British air ministry, reporting tonight on the 30-plane German raid upon Croydon airport yesterday, made this remark:

"Not a single one of the enemy formation which attacked Croydon yesterday returned to tell the tale."

Berlin reports, however, attempted to minimize the size of yesterday's raids.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, authoritative German commentary, quoted a German high command source to the effect that only about 200 bombers were sent to England under protection of 320 Messerschmitt fighter and destroyer planes.

"This is not a large-scale attack, no matter what the effects on England may be," said Dienst Aus Deutschland. "It is a strong armed reconnaissance force." An Associated Press staff man at Dover today counted that many bombers in several flights, and British estimates generally said that at least 1,000 and possibly three times that many German planes were engaged yesterday.

at the STATE CAPITOL

The State Welfare Department will enter its seventh day today without a director. Braswell Deen resigned last Saturday to run for congress from the eighth district, and Governor Rivers has not picked a successor. The governor was at his home in Lakeland yesterday.

Cost of operating Georgia's new office building is below the average of seven Atlanta commercial office buildings, B. E. Thrasher Jr., secretary of the Capitol Square Building Commission, said yesterday. He explained the cost of operation for six months was 40.7 cents per square foot, as compared with 52.7 cents per square foot for air-conditioned buildings, and 46.6 for buildings without air-conditioning.

at the COURTHOUSE

Improvement of the 50-acre Perkerson park in the Capitol View-Sylvan Hills section of Atlanta will begin Monday, it was announced yesterday by Troy G. Chastain, chairman of the Fulton County Commission's parks committee. The city purchased the tract several months ago, and the county agreed to develop the park area.

Halls of the Fulton county courthouse yesterday rang with sacred harp singing. Judge Jesse M. Wood's courtroom on the second floor was converted into an auditorium as singers swarmed into Atlanta to attend the annual convention, which will continue through tomorrow.

Rural Power Line Work Starts Soon in 4 Counties

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
MILLEN, Ga., Aug. 16.—Bids were received and contract let yesterday by the Planters' Electric Membership Corporation for the erection of 137 miles of rural power lines in Burke, Jenkins, Screven and Emanuel counties. The successful bidder was the Alrich Electric Construction Company, of Augusta, for the sum of $81,234.78.

Construction is expected to get under way within 15 days.

The lines under the contract are extensions which will fill in gaps in the counties served by the co-operative. They will give the "co-op" a total of 438 miles of lines.

Domestic help of the better class—the kind that stay with you—worth-while help—can be secured through a Help Wanted ad in The Constitution.

Schools Sponsor Defense Program

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
MONROE, Ga., Aug. 16.—The active defense of the United States and it stands will be one of the major undertakings of Walton county school during 1940-41 school term.

Plans for the undertaking were laid by a special committee on national defense, composed of representative teachers from all over the county, and headed by Harvey Ferguson, principal of Monroe Junior High school.

The major lines along which the schools will work are:

1. Use the full facilities of the schools to develop physical vigor on the part of adults and young people.

2. Training in vocational work, particularly for girls who have to take over duties normally performed by men in case of war.

3. Vigorous teachings of American ideals, and the facts about the American way of life, particularly attention being given to young people.

4. Assistance to both children and adults in recognizing and analyzing propaganda.

5. Proffer of service in reaching adults with citizenship information, and vigorous guarding against the Fifth Column.

6. Calling constant attention to the advantages of living in America, in a democracy, through various types of public programs and entertainment.

LaGrange Baby Party Held at Joint Birthplace

As reported to the senate, the measure would permit American ships to enter combat zones and bring out children under 16 years of age provided they had sponsors in this country who would guarantee that they would not become public charges.

The house had imposed a requirement that the sponsor be liable for support of a refugee child on the same basis as his own children.
